Batteries—Earnshaw and Cochrane; Grimes and Wilson.

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Staff Correspondent.

SPORTSMAN'S PARK, ST. LOUIS, Oct. 6.—Burleigh Grimes, veteran spitball righthander, opposed George Earnshaw, likewise a righthander, on the mound this afternoon as the St. Louis Cardinals and Philadelphia Athletics clashed in the fifth battle of the 1930 World Series.

Earnshaw, who defeated the Cardinals in the second game at Philadelphia last week, was out to score his second straight victory in the series.

Grimes, defeated by Lefty Grove in the opener, despite the fact he allowed only five hits, was out to score his initial triumph.

With the two teams deadlocked with two victories apiece, today's contest took on added importance inasmuch as the winning club would be only one victory away from the world championship.

Threatening weather cut in on the attendance today, 36,000 turning out for the contest.

FIRST INNING

ATHLETICS—Bishop up. Ball 1, a low spitter; ball 2, low spitter; strike 1, fast ball; ball 3, low spitter; strike 2; strike 3. Bishop was called out on strikes.

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Laura Ingalls, aviatrix seeking a new women's trans-continental flight record, landed at Fairfax Airport this afternoon. She took off from St. Louis this morning.

A light rain was falling when Miss Ingalls arrived and flying conditions were poor. After receiving reports that the bad weather extended westward, she announced that she planned to remain here overnight and take off tomorrow morning.

Her total flying time since her departure from Roosevelt Field, N. Y., yesterday was computed at 12 hours and 1 minute.

HOOVER URGES OBEDIENCE TO LAWS

Addresses Legion Convention In Boston; Leaves on Trip to Carolinas Tonight

BOSTON, Oct. 6.—President Hoover today called upon members of the American Legion to enlist in the cause of law enforcement, just as 13 years ago they enlisted for the defense of the nation.

They can, he suggested, exert a vast influence through their 11,000 posts for better citizenship.

Mr. Hoover mentioned no particular law in his address to the legionnaires, assembled here in their twelfth annual convention, but many of his hearers read into his remarks an indirect reference to the freely-violated prohibition law.

"Uphold Laws"

As the text of his speech to the veterans, the President took their own declaration of purposes at the time the Legion was founded in Paris right after the war—"To uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States; to maintain law and order, etc." He said:

"The first high purpose you express is to uphold and defend the Constitution and to maintain law and order in the United States. Happily your ideal is my first and most sacred duty. As President of the United States, I am sworn by the whole people to maintain the constitution and enforce the laws.

"No man should dare call himself a faithful American and suggest otherwise. You have recognized that the upholding of the Constitution and the enforcement of the laws must not,

Lewis or Doak May Take Davis' Place

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Selection of a new Secretary of Labor is receiving considerable attention from President Hoover, who has several names before him, including John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, and W. N. Doak, of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen.

Many observers believe the choice lies between these two. Mr. Hoover is prepared to make known his selection shortly after the November election, should Secretary Davis be successful at that time in his race for the Senate from Pennsylvania.

FRENCH SOLDIERS REMOVING BODIES FROM CHARRED WRECKAGE OF THE R-101

This picture was flown to Paris, telephoned to London, radioed to New York, telephoned to Cleveland, flown to Pittsburgh to show you the blackened steel that alone remains of the R-101, giant British airship that crashed near Beauvais, small French town, killing 47 aboard her.

Tribute Paid Westinghouse Here by Industrial Leaders of World

Statesmen and industrial and financial giants from all corners of the world stood today arm-to-arm with brawny fabricators of steel and other useful products, as the multitude paid reverent tribute to the genius of George Westinghouse, pioneer Pittsburgh inventor and creator of an industrial empire.

The occasion was the unveiling of a memorial to Westinghouse in Schenley Park at 2:30 o'clock. It marked also the eighty-fourth anniversary of the inventor's birth.

President Hoover sent a letter of regret that he could not be present.

Mayor Charles H. Kline, who proclaimed this as "Westinghouse Day" in Pittsburgh, members of City Council, and virtually all city and county officials joined in honoring the man whose vision made possible the world-wide manufacturing organization which bears his name.

The memorial was built with small contributions from the 50,000 employes of Westinghouse mills in every part of the world. The Pittsburgh district plants

Shoe in R-101 Ruins Hints Woman Was Aboard

BEAUVAIS, France, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—A woman's shoe with a buckle still on it was found in the wreckage of the R-101. The chief of Beauvais police said he believed it indicated there was a woman stenographer aboard the dirigible at the time of the disaster.

The shoe and a typewriter were found late yesterday afternoon by a soldier of the 51st Infantry guarding the scene of the disaster.

Police said they believed that, although no woman figures in the list of passengers, one of the high officials traveling in the airship may at the last moment have decided to secure services of a stenographer for the voyage.

The objects will be turned over by Commander Seurin, of the regiment to British experts for examination.

Police still clung today to the idea that more persons were aboard the ship than the London Air Ministry recorded in their official communique, which listed 54 passengers, with 47 dead and 7 survivors. Rescue squads found enough arms and legs in the debris of the dirigible to make as many as two or three more bodies than the 47 which lay in the chapel at Allonne, it was said.

Betrothed King Boris' Sister Also Engaged

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Not to be outdone by her brother, King Boris, Princess Eudoxia, of Bulgaria, it is reported here, has become engaged, and to an Italian.

Unofficially it is learned that the Princess, who is 32 years old, has betrothed herself to Duke Charles, of Spoleto, son of Prince Aosta, of Italy.

The Duke, who is 30 and an archaeologist, at present is in a hospital with a broken leg suffered while automobile racing.

It is learned also that King Boris informed the head of the Orthodox church on September 25 of his impending engagement to Princess Giovanna, of Italy, and the same day told the diplomatic corps, who were surprised, knowing the religious difficulties, but were pleased at the news.

It is said one ceremony will be performed at Rome and the second at Preslav, ancient Bulgarian capital, in the presence of the exiled King, Ferdinand, Boris' father.

ECKENER CITES POSSIBLE CAUSES OF DIRIGIBLE DISASTER

GRAF CHIEF HITS R-101 DESIGN

Zeppelin Commander Sees Weight of Craft Partly Responsible for Crash

By DR. HUGO ECKENER,

Commander of the Graf Zeppelin on its Atlantic flights and on the Hearst-Eckener trip around the world.

As Told to Karl H. Von Wiegand.

LEIPZIG, Germany, Oct. 6.—The terrible fate of Britain's new airship, the R-101, en route to India was first received by me as I stepped from the Graf Zeppelin as it landed at the Leipzig airdrome. It is the most appalling air tragedy since the war.

From the information available at this hour it is difficult to arrive at a conclusion as to what was the actual cause of the disaster which so tragically ended so many lives that were valuable to the world of aviation. Not a few of them were well known to me, especially Sir Sefton Brancker, Lord Thomson, Maj. Scott and Lieut. Col. Richmond.

SEES LOSS OF GAS

Therefore, what little I can now say is said with reservation, because all the facts are not known to me and it is difficult to make definite conclusions. I am impressed that the R-101 was too heavy when it left England. That seems fairly certain. It is difficult to otherwise explain why the ship was flying so low at Beauvais.

If the gas cells were taut with hydrogen to a point which we call "prall," as the ship left the ground there would have been no room for expansion as the R-101 ascended and the valves in the cells must have begun to blow off gas automatically as the ship got into the air.

The loss of that gas naturally decreased the lift and made the ship correspondingly heavier. When they ran into the rainstorm, if that information is correct, the water on the immense expanse of the 800-foot ship added a considerable weight, which together with the change in temperature could have caused the ship to settle if its lifting capacity were considerably overloaded.

I can see no other explanation except badly leaking gas cells—and that is improbable—for the ship being so near the ground as reports say it was.

BUILT HEAVY

The R-101 was built extraordinarily heavy. It must be remembered that about 40 or 50 feet were added to her length to give her additional gas volume and correspondingly more lift. There are many questions one might ask. Did the officers realize they were so low, or was the earth blotted out in the darkness and the rain?

The altimeters, if functioning, should have shown the height at which they were riding.

Was any of the water ballast dropped to lighten the ship, to check its fall, or even to cause it to rise? I believe only two of the engines are reversible, while on the Graf Zeppelin all five engines may be reversed, although there again I am not informed on what latest changes were made in the R-101.

The disaster is a hard blow at hydrogen filled airships because of the loss of public confidence which may follow, but the disaster to the R-101 is no proof that airships are impractical or unsafe in operation, for against that charge I need but point to the Graf Zeppelin which now has flown more than 150,000 miles, in the cold of Siberia, through the intense sun of the tropics across the equator—through storms and snows without harm to a passenger or member of the crew.

The future of the airship lies with non-inflammable gas. In that development America holds the lead.

SURVIVORS TELL OF AIR WRECK

Universal Service.

BEAUVAIS, France, Oct. 6.—Survivors of the ill-fated R-101 who were being treated in a Beauvais hospital for their injuries gave the following graphic description of the disaster to Universal Service last night.

Engineer Harry J. Leach said:

"I was resting in the smoking room when the crash occurred. I grabbed a chair that was nailed to the floor, tore it up and broke the paneling with it so I could get out. I can't assign any reason for the crash. We had bad visibility all the way, however. The force of the explosion was upward. I believe Lord Thomson was asleep in his cabin when the crash came."

Artur V. Bell, another member of the crew, said:

"All I know is that the ship suddenly dived earthward when we were making about 65 knots an hour. There was a terrific bump, then an explosion that shot us upward. The ship immediately burst into flames, which spread from one end to the other. Then the deluge of water came which saved our lives."

John Henry Hinks, also a member of the crew, said:

"All our engines were working well, but somehow we couldn't get much altitude. While we were flying over the channel the instruments showed us to be at an altitude of 1,000 feet, but I could distinctly see the ripples on the water. In my opinion the ship was too heavy."

King, Queen Mourn For Dead of R-101

SANDRINGHAM, Eng., Oct. 6.—(INS.)—Loss of 47 lives in the crash of the dirigible R-101 brought deep sorrow to the King and Queen of England today.

News of the appalling tragedy was brought to King George and Queen Mary at their Norfolkshire Castle here shortly before leaving to attend Sunday morning services at the little Church of St. Mary Magdalen, where the royal couple sat with bowed heads through the service.

MacDonald Grief Stricken Over Dirigible Disaster

By HARRY R. FLORY,

International News Service.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—While representatives of the British and French governments gathered near Beauvais, France, in a tragic inquest over the charred remains of the once-great dirigible R-101, the distaster itself gave way in Britain today to a nation-wide controversy as to whether airships are worth their cost.

Premier MacDonald, seen by reporters when he left 10 Downing street this afternoon for Llandudno, Wales, to address the Labor Party conference, appeared a broken man.

He was grief-stricken over the loss of Lord Thomason, one of his closest friends, as well as by the death of other trusted advisers aboard the dirigible.

He seemed to need all the persuasions of his family and members of his cabinet before agreeing to leave London.

The country is divided into two camps.

On one hand, the victims of the tragedy are being hailed as heroes who died in the cause of aviation and the advancement of science.

On the other, they are mourned as martyrs sacrificed on the altar of national political policy.

Lieut. Commander J. M. Kenworthy, Labor M. P. and leader of the campaign against future use of airships, was most bitter in his denunciation of any attempt to continue development of dirigibles.

DISASTER BLOW TO GAS SHIPS

LONDON, Oct. 6.—(Universal)—Commander Sir Denistoun Burney, designer of the R-101, last night said:

"I am shocked and appalled at the loss of so many officers and warm personal friends with whom I had served in building Britain's two giant airships.

"Until more facts are known, I can only speculate as to the cause of the disaster. From the few reports I have heard so far, I gather the R-101 was steadily losing gas and must have been seeking a landing place.

"Approaching a hill, the natural downward draught would force the nose of the vessel downward, and in crashing I judge one or the other of the forward gondolas was driven through the fabric and into contact with one of the hydrogen gas-bags.

"The contact between the hot engine and the gas-bag would cause an instantaneous explosion, which would be communicated to the other ballonettes and cause the ship's immediate destruction.

"I believe America and Germany will continue their lighter-than-air programs, but I fear this disaster will deal a heavy blow to that type of machine in Great Britain."

Market Crash Sends Rich Girls to Work

EAST ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Ten girls of social prominence got jobs as saleswomen in a new store. The Y. W. C. LAKE COAL RATE HEARING OPENS

Representatives of Pittsburgh shippers were in Chicago today attending the hearing before an examiner of the Interstate Commerce Commission as leaders in the fight the Pittsburgh district is making for equitable railroad freight rates on lake cargo coal. The hearing was held in the Edgewater Beach Hotel.

The railroads against which shippers of Eastern Ohio and Western Pennsylvania complain have been ordered to submit testimony as directed, in an effort to justify the prevailing rate differentials on coal shipments from northern and southern mines to lake ports for trans-shipments by boats. The hearing will last several days.

A. B. McElvany, secretary of the Western Pennsylvania coal traffic bureau and C. B. Ackerman, railroad traffic expert, who testified at previous hearings, will submit to cross examination by railroad attorneys.

Coolidge Cites Legion's Great Responsibilities

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Oct. 6.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

The annual convention of the American Legion beginning at Boston today will be a notable event. As we get farther from the war and the veterans grow older, their meetings have less of the aspect of a frolic of exhuberant youth, and become more the serious affair of mature and thoughtful men. Consequently the Legion is more flourishing and holds a higher place in the esteem of all service men and of the public.

Calvin Coolidge

It is distinctly a patriotic organization. The support of American institutions is the chief object of its members. Because of them order and liberty are more secure. They are firm advocates of peace which they seek to promote through adequate preparation for national defense and the just and temperate conduct of a self-respecting people toward all the rest of the world.

Because the Legion has come into a position of great power and influence it has great responsibilities. It can set the standard for this generation in public thought and public duty. It can assume a leadership in peace scarcely less important than the service it performed in war. A grateful country looks to the Legion with increasing confidence.

GAS LEAKS HINT FLAWS IN R-101 CONSTRUCTION

Investigation Kept Secret, Repairs Made; Experts Called Airship 'Obsolete'

By ROBERT WELLES RITCHIE

Universal Service.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—Did Air Minister Lord Thomson and his 53 companions, including the best aeronautical brains of Britain, sail on the R-101 for India in a valorous spirit of chivalry, knowing they were undergoing a grave risk in order to make a gesture linking the empire?

On June 28, the occasion of the Royal Air Force pageant at Hendon, Universal Service has learned, the R-101 sailed from Cardington to Hendon, circled Hendon and barely managed to return to Cardington because of serious leakage in the supporting hydrogen balloonettes.

60 LEAKS FOUND

An investigation, kept carefully secret, is said to have revealed 60 leaks in the balloonettes due to their rubbing against the supports on the hundred-mile flight to Hendon and return. Since then the airship was cut in half and put together with a 45-foot insertion.

Official and civilian London alike are mortally stunned by the disaster which has destroyed nearly the whole of the air force and airship higher personnel, and which has probably marked Britain's retirement from the lighter-than-air field.

Closely associatied with talk about the calamity is repetition of words that were uttered at a banquet aboard the airship on the night before she cast her moorings. Those words were:

"Gentlemen, you may smoke."

Never before in the history of dirigible aviation had such a privilege been accorded. Experienced aviators could hardly conceal their astonishment.

CRITICIZED BY EXPERTS

The R-101 was the world's largest airship. Originally intended for passenger and frieght service between England, Egypt and India, it was constructed at a cost of $10,000,000.

New and lighter engines had been installed in preparation for the flight to India, on which it crashed.

The R-101 was criticized by some airship designers as "obsolete and a failure," at the time of its original launching in 1929. The The improvements on the ship followed this year.

Designed to make airship travel a supreme luxury, the dirigible was fitted with steam radiators to heat passengers' quarters; a dining salon was built to seat 50 persons and the main lounge, 60 by 32 feet, had a dancing floor.

There was a cozy smoking lounge, equipped with electric lighters. The two-berth staterooms were compared to steamship cabins.

Two Go on Trial In Murder Charges

Two Negroes were placed on trial, charged with murder, in Criminal Court today. Charles Jones, 40, of Hazelwood avenue, was arraigned charged with the shooting to death of John Gilford, Negro, November 23, 1924. Harry Kane, of Elm street, went on trial accused of stabbing to death Gilbert Smith, Negro, in a Clark street house last February 8.

Stowaway Believed Victim Of Crash; Inquiry to Find Cause of Disaster Opens aboard, was the only one definitely identified. He was recognized by a signet ring found on his hand.

IDENTIFICATION FAILS

The bodies, now lying in state in the Beauvais city hall, bedecked with Union Jacks supplied by kindly Frenchmen, will be sealed in their coffins, and because of the hopelessness of any identification and their badly-burned condition, relatives will not be allowed to inspect them.

Eight men barely escaped alive from the infero, all but two of them seriously injured. A rigger, H. G. Radcliffe, died of wounds today.

Among the other charred bodies laid in a long row in coffins in an improvised chapel here are those of Sir Sefton Brancker, director of civil aviation; Lieut. H. C. Irwin, commander of the ship; Wing Commander R. B. B. Colmore, director of British airship development; Maj. H. O. Scott and Col V. C. Richmond, assistant directors of airship development.

SHIP DEFECTIVE

While a heavy storm was undoubtedly the direct cause of the disaster, there are many who say the great dirigible was gravely defective and unsafe, and that British air officials knew this to be the case when the tragic trip to India was begun. The R-101 was characterized as obsolete even before its construction was completed, and was described as "Britain's $5,000,000 blunder." After an unsatisfactory test flight the ship was changed in many particulars, including its enlargement by insertion of a new midsection. The projected India trip was its first long flight.

Weighted down by heavy rains, it is believed, the dirigible was unable to gain altitude and the crash resulted. It is reported, however, that a secret inquiry some time ago had disclosed a faulty structure and many gas leaks, which may have contributed to the disaster.

The questioning of survivors and examination of the scene of the wreckage was first on the program of the joint Anglo-French commission, temporarily formed to expedite inquiries. Air Chief Marshal Sir John Salmon, accompanied by Air Commodore F. V. Holt, flew here from London to personally conduct the investigation. They were aided by nine other British technical aviation experts, among them being Squadron Leader R. S. Booth, who commanded the R-100 on her recent flight to Canada.

The French air minister, Laurent-Eynac, arrived to supervise the French staff of experts on the scene.

Thousands of peasants and curious from Paris and other cities rushed in droves to the tragic spot today, guarded from the public by a cordon of police and local officials. The huge debris of broken and twisted girder steel lies in a muddy beet field across a hedge and into a hill pasture with scraps of aluminum and other parts blown by force of the subsequent explosion more than 100 yards over the fields.

Brush and brambles and mud hold fast the crushed nose where the once proud airship plowed out of the skies to end its maiden voyage to India abruptly. The port side of the torn starboard lies in the brush and its starboard side far out in the open field.

FLAG STILL FLIES

On the stern of the rudder, as if dramatically defiant of the elements, flutters still the flag of the British air force.

Mystery as yet confuses a large part of the tragic events, but it was fairly well established that a terrific rain squall which struck the ship over Northern France contributed extensively to the cause, probably weighing her down so much that her lifting power became seriously handicapped. The R-101 was proceeding south 45 miles north of Paris when the fatal moment crumpled the framework lengthwise upon the hill.

Whatever the exact cause, she apparently soared over the countryside in the vicinity of Beauvais at a remarkably low altitude. Ground witnesses of the crash said the ship seemed out of control and unable to swing herself off from the twisting winds and cross-currents, giving rise to belief that battering rain and wind had broken her tail.

The roar of motors close to the rooftops at 2 a. m. Sunday (9 p. m. Saturday New York time) brought many a country resident and farmer in the Beauvais vicinity from his feather bed, thus making available quite a number of eye-witnesses.

Dream of Wife Saves 'Sparks' Of R-101

SCARBOROUGH, Eng., Oct. 6.—(INS.)—A wife who believed in dreams and pretended illness saved the life of her husband, normally a radio operator on the ill-fated R-101, it was revealed today.

John Meegan told interviewers here that he probably owed his life to Mrs. Meegan, who warned him of her premonition of disaster. Three times she dreamed and on each occasion saw the dirigible burst into flame and crashed to the ground.

Convinced that some mysterious power had warned her of the fate in store for the airship, she feigned severe illness on the day before the R-101 soared away on her maiden voyage to India and forced her husband to seek permission to remain with her.

built a nine-column machine, called for by the specifications.

Armstrong said:

"It was explained to the commissioners that the seven-column machine could be added to just as columns are affixed to an adding machine."

Himes previously had testified that a seven-column machine would not be easily changed, but that a complete rebuilding of the machine would be necessary.

M'GOVERN AMAZED

Commissioner C. C. McGovern admitted on the witness stand he didn't know what type of machine was required by the contract. He said:

"I was rather amazed at the time."

Attorney C. F. C. Arensberg, representing Francis S. Guthrie, the complainant, closed his case after entering on the record the minutes of the meeting at which the contract was awarded and questioning Controller R. G. Woodside and Engineer Himes. He stated that the court action was no reflection on the commissioners, but that certain deviations eliminated competitive bidding.

WOODSIDE QUIZZED

The envelope in which the company's bid was submitted had been destroyed, Woodside asserted. One of the allegations in the suit is that the bid was submitted in an envelope other than the regulation kind. It was customary to destroy such envelopes, he said.

Woodside testified:

"The kind of envelope is immaterial. It has been the custom to accept bid submitted in any kind of envelope so long as they are sealed."

Attorney Arensberg asked Woodside if the Poole Company had submitted a statement as to successful operation of machines as required in the specifications.

Woodside replied:

"I don't have that. It never came back to our office."

"Do you mean there was such a statement?"

"It did not come back."

Francis S. Guthrie, the complainant, charged in his suit that the company's bid did not comply with the specifications, and that it has no machines in operation. He also avers that the $100,000 bond required is insufficient to protect the county's interests. He asked a preliminary injunction.

INJUNCTION SOUGHT

A preliminary injunction against the County Commissioners and others to restrain them from carrying out the terms of the agreement is sought.

Among those in the courtroom when the hearing began were County Commissioners Joseph G. Armstrong and C. C. McGovern, Mrs. Della M. Hershey, of the League of Women Voters and a member of the Citizens' Voting Machine Committee; William H. Ziefel, chief clerk to the commissioners, and Gilbert C. Cloonan, head of the bureau of elections.

EXTENSION GRANTED

The County Commissioners last week voted to give the Poole company a 90-day extension of time to deliver the first machines, 70 of which originally were promised for October 1.

Commissioner McGovern subsequently visited the company's plant in Baltimore and reported that, while the company had no machines ready, the engineers expected to have one ready for demonstration soon.

BIG ALCOHOL PLANT HERE RAIDED

Six Arrested by Prohibition Agents in Vickroy Street House; Large Still Seized

One of the largest bootleg alcohol plants ever uncovered in Pittsburgh was raided at noon today by prohibition agents in a three-story warehouse in Vickroy street, near Magee street.

Six men were arrested, the raiders claiming the plant was in operation when they arrived.

The plant, according to the dry agents, had a daily capacity of 2,000 gallons.

Among the paraphernalia seized, according to the federal officers, were a 4,000-gallon still, four 1,500-gallon vats, and 500 gallons of bootleg alcohol.

Those arrested were booked as: Charles Peters, 39, of 1612 Fifth avenue; Thomas Parker, 33, of 1620 Fifth avenue; Louie Johnson, 40, of 1322 Fifth avenue; Charles Schmid, 41, of 182 South Craig street; Joseph Weber, 28, of 832 North Lincoln avenue, and George Dill, 28, of 800 Bluff street.

They were arraigned before a United States Commissioner.

CRUSADERS ASK MAGEE'S AID

Wilson S. McClintock, executive committee chairman of the Crusaders, has urged former Congressman James M. Magee not to follow his withdrawal from the executive committee with a repudiation of the organization.

Magee wrote McClintock last week that he had joined the Crusaders believing its purpose was to foster the anti-dry movement, but had become convinced that the Crusaders' objective was to defeat Gifford Pinchot as Republican nominee for governor by the election of John M. Hemphill, Democrat and Liberal.

McClintock wrote:

"This is no time for party regularity. The Crusaders are for Hemphill, the Liberal party is for him, the clearest thinking men and women of our Commonwealth are for him and we are confident of his election as governor of Pennsylvania.

"The Crusaders will, undoubtedly, indorse other candidates for public offices who indorse our platform. * * * I assure you that The Crusaders are a separate organization from any political party and allied to none.

"We have not singled out Mr. Pinchot for opposition, but we have indorsed Mr. Hemphill because he is supporting the platform of the Crusaders."

URGE U. S. LIFT HELIUM BAN

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(INS.)—"Because it is the humanitarian thing to do," a movement was to be started today by leaders in American aviation by which helium, a non-inflammable gas, will be offered to all the countries of the world. Export of the gas possibly might have prevented the fearful R-101 disaster, in the opinion of aviation leaders behind the movement.

Helium is found only in the United States and by act of Congress its use is confined to this country.

Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of naval aeronautics, declared the huge loss of life undoubtedly was due to the terrific explosion of the dangerous hydrogen gas in the crash.

Admiral Moffett urged that the United States lift the ban which now exists on exportation of helium gas, so other nations of the world may use this which does not.

Eccentric Wills Candy To Mrs. Coolidge

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—(INS.)—One-pound boxes of candy are given to Mrs. Calvin Coolidge and 108 other persons under provisions of the will of Rockwell Sayre, eccentric realtor, which was filed for probate here.

Sayre, who was shot to death in his office by his son, Sidney, on September 26, filled his 35-page testament with poetry and essays upon such subjects as prohibition, pacifism, birds, cats, capital punishment and war. The realtor was believed to be wealthy, but the will revealed he was insolvent.

Thirty years ago Sayre manifested a great antipathy for cats, announcing to the newspapers that he planned "to wipe every cat out of existence by 1925." He said he would pay 10 cents each for the first 100 cats killed and a grand prize of $5 to the person killing the greatest number.

Mrs. Coolidge, he stated in his will, "killed the White House cat for us to save Coolidge and the children from cat disease and to save the mama song birds."

IRENE CHEERS DAGUE IN CELL, HOPES TO BEAT CHAIR

BOTH STILL SEEM TO BE IN LOVE

Hearing in Appeal on Death Sentence in Policeman's Killing Up This Week

By AL GOUGH,
Staff Correspondent.

NEW CASTLE, Oct. 6.—Irene Schroeder, blonde trigger woman, and Walter Glenn Dague, her gunman companion in the killing of Corp. Brady Paul, are still in love and hopeful as time draws near for hearing on their appeals to the State Supreme Court from the sentence of death imposed in Lawrence County.

Hearing on the appeals is scheduled for this week in Pittsburgh.

Separated by bars, the condemned sweethearts see little of each other, but when they do it is an event in their lives. Once a day, Irene passes the corridor where Dague is usually standing behind the barrier of steel.

Their undying devotion is expressed in the few words of greeting that pass between them. Irene's usual inquiry is:

"Hello, honey—how are you today?"

Then, if Dague shows signs of worry or discontent, her concern is shown with the solicitous admonition:

"Don't get downhearted and blue, sweetheart. Remember, I love you!"

The blonde gunwoman keeps up her spirit with song. Occasionally, her father and sister visit her, usually bringing Donnie, her 5-year-old son, with them.

Letters from relatives are numerous. Dague receives no mail other than a daily newspaper from Wheeling. Neither does he have visitors. None of his relatives have visited him since the trial.

The interest of Mrs. Ella J. Mountz, Houtzdale coal operator, who has retained Attorney Percy Allen Rose in association with Attorneys Thomas Dickey and Benj. Jarrett, who represented the blonde and Dague at their trials, has revived hope for the doomed sweethearts.

BANDIT KILLERS HUNTED

While county detectives broadened their search for the three Negro bandits who killed August Braum, Jr., meat market proprietor in First street, West Elizabeth, city detectives began a hunt for thugs who staged three holdups early yesterday.

Braum was shot when he defied the bandits by throwing a knife and a cleaver at the holdup trio. The killers fled over the Elizabeth bridge and held up the Price Service Station in Second street, Elizabeth.

Entering the Del Rae Hotel, at Collins avenue and Broad street, Sunday, three thugs rifled the cash register of $100 and took $21 in cash and a watch valued at $75 from J. W. Marshall, of 7330 Bennett street.

The same trio, police believe, robbed Alfred E. Dunn, of 7504 Hamilton avenue, of $44 at Flavel and Station streets, a short time before.

Another pedestrian, Earl Bennett, of 729 Chislett street, was held up by two armed men as he was about to enter his home. From him the pair took $40, police reported.

Clothing and jewelry valued at $2,000 was stolen from five homes over the week-end.

REVOLT SWEEPS 6 BRAZILIAN STATES

Martial Law Declared as Strife Spreads; Federal Agents Dicker for Peace

International News Service.

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 6.—Six states of Brazil are flaming with revolt, and large bands of insurrectionists under the leadership of Francisco Flores da Cuna are sweeping swiftly toward Rio de Janeiro, it was reported in dispatches from Montevideo today.

The revolt, directed against President Washington Luis and President-elect Julio Prestes, has swept Rio Grande do Sul, Minas Gereas, Pernambuco, Ceara, Santa Catalina and Parahyba, the report declared.

MARTIAL LAW TO 1931

Owing to the gracity of the situation, President Luis today decreed martial law throughout Brazil until December 31.

This follows similar action Saturday, when the government proclaimed a state of siege in the states of Rio Grande do Sul and Minas Gereas, where the revolution originated.

FEDERALS SEEK PEACE

The Brazilian government is also reported to have sent out plenipotentiaries to meet the rebel leaders in an effort to reach terms under which the insurrections might be abandoned.

The offers made by the federal emissaries in Rio Grande do Sul have been rejected by the revolutionists, the reports declared.

The outcome of interviews in other states is unknown, but present indicaions are the rebels will refused to accept any terms but complete surrender.

2 BOY ROBBERS HOLD UP STORE

While hundreds of children played in the street nearby, two boy robbers today forced Stella Kindsvater, 20, of 1202 Esplanade street, clerk in a chain store at 925 James street, to turn over to them $40 from the cash register.

Charles Steinmetz, store manager, had gone to lunch when two boys entered with drawn revolvers. She screamed once, she told police. The boys threatened her and made her tell them where the money was.

The youths fled from the store to the street, where children from the Latimer Junior High School were playing, and escaped in an automobile. Miss Kindsvater said the boys were about 15 years old.

GERMAN PLANE CRASH KILLS 8

BERLIN, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Six passengers and two crew members lost their lives today when a Berlin-to-Vienna Lufthansa airplane crashed near Dresden. None of its occupants escaped death. Two women were among the victims, Frau Graefe, wife of an official of the line at Sofia, and Fraulein Bluemel.

The airplane was powered with one motor. Its capacity was 10 passengers and a crew of two. It had been in service just over two weeks. Other planes of the same type are used mainly as freight carriers.

The wrecked machine bore the number D 1930, which originally had been assigned to the DO-X but withdrawn when the Dornier commander, Friedrich Christiansen, refused to pilot the giant plane if it carried a number whose digits totaled 13. The DO-X now carries the number D 1929.

BOARD RESUMES HEARINGS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—The Radio Commission today began hearing applications by broadcasting stations in the fourth zone, comprising the Middle Western states, for increases of power to 50,000 watts.

Henry A. Bellows, vice president of the Columbia Broadcasting System, contended on behalf of Station WCCO, Minneapolis, that the commission ruling restricting the number of such high powered stations on cleared channels in each zone to four was "unsound."

Insisting better results would be obtained by deciding each request for higher power on its merits, Bellows said if the commission maintained its ruling restricting such stations to four in a zone, he would recommend location of those for the fourth zone as follows: One in Missouri, one in Minneapolis, and two in the Chicago area. He testified the requested increases in power would involve an expenditure of from $100,000 to $200,000.

HOOVER'S LETTER

President Hoover's letter to Mr. Humphrey and A. W. Robertson, board chairman of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, read:

"While it will be impossible for me to attend the exercises dedicating the memorial to George Westinghouse on October 6, I wish your committee to know that I have a high appreciation of the outstanding accomplishments of Mr. Westinghouse during his notable career.

"The inventions he created and the industrial institutions he established have been a most substantial contribution to our American life.

"Characters such as he well deserve to be honored by their contemporaries and their successors.

"You do well to commemorate his memory."

TRIBUTE TO WESTINGHOUSE

Mr. Burke said:

"George Westinghouse never wavered in his purpose nor surrendered in his determination. Setbacks seemed only to intensify his determination to attain his purpose and to conquer in the end, and the world is enriched as a consequence.

"No more striking example of the value of men who, in periods of depression and adversity, keep their heads cool and their faces to the front, can be found in American industrial history than his unceasing faith and fighting spirit during the most discouraging period in his financial and industrial career.

"Let us here and now, as we dedicate his memorial, also dedicate ourselves to the revival of his spirit, which never failed to see a better day beyond the dawn."

A luncheon for 250 Westinghouse executives was held at noon in the William Penn Hotel.

Labor Department Offers Rules for Child Training

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—A nine-point program for parents to follow in training their children has been proposed by the children's bureau of the labor department.

Explaining that "to be a good father or mother is one of the hardest jobs on earth" but that "it is the finest, biggest, job, too," the bureau made the following suggestions to parents:

"Tell and act the truth to your children.

"Keep your promises, good or bad.

"Decide which things are most important for a child to do and then be consistent about seeing that he does them. Do not nag him about little things that do not matter much.

"Do not say 'no' one time 'yes' the next time for the same thing. Your child will never learn that way what is good to do and what is bad.

"Break up bad habits by keeping the child busy with interesting things to do so that he forgets the old habit.

"Pay no attention to him when he tries to get what he wants by temper tantrums, by whining, or by vomiting.

"See that he gets things (if they are good for him) only when he is quiet and happy and polite.

"Keep cool and quiet yourself. Speak in a quiet voice.

"Show the child you are pleased when he tries."

Rumanian Premier Quits In Tiff Over Queen Helen

BUCHAREST, Oct. 6.—(INS.)—Premier Jules Maniu, of Rumania, tendered his resignation to King Carol today.

The step was taken in deference to Carol's wishes to reorganize the cabinet. The premier had differed with Carol over the status of Queen Helen, the king's divorced wife.

Maniu, who was at the helm of the Rumanian ship of state before King Carol staged his coup d'etat several months ago, resigned as soon as the monarch had established himself in Bucharest.

At the king's request, however, he again accepted the premiership and welded together a strong government to support the new sovereign.

PLOT TO BREAK JAIL FOILED

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 6.—(AP.)—An attempted break from Erie County jail by 170 male prisoners was thwarted last night after a near riot had followed discovery of the plot.

Two prisoners in cells in the upper galleries were found in communication with two men in the street outside the prison. An investigation revealed pieces of sharpened tin with which the prisoners had been digging away putty from window panes in a supposed effort to receive through the bars from the outside weapons to be used in overpowering guards.

Sheriff C. A. Freiberg placed in solitary confinement the two prisoners, Carl Holmes, 20, of Buffalo, and Paul McKane, 20, of Chicago.

Bedlam reigned throughout the prison for nearly an hour.

The two men endeavoring to smuggle arms into the jail escaped.

With 235 cases listed for trial, the October term of Criminal Court opened today.

H. N. Smallwood, of 345 Sunset street, Mt. Lebanon, was selected foreman of the grand jury, which will consider 740 cases listed. Two trial juries have been selected to try two Negro murder cases.

George V. Moore is president judge. Judges William H. McNaugher and Samuel Gardner and four visiting judges also are on the bench.

The visiting judges are: J. Frank Graff, of Armstrong County; John H. McCann, of Cambria County; Davis W. Henderson, of Fayette County, and M. W. Fleming, of Center County.

Co-Operation Asked In Anti-Fire Week

Co-operation of motorists of the city and county in helping to make "Fire Prevention Week" a success is asked by John M. Rice president of the Pittsburgh Motor Club. Motorists are requested to remove all inflammable material from their garages and automobiles. "Fire Prevention Week" opened here today under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce.

Dog Worries Bear As Master Escapes

FRANKLIN, W. Va., Oct. 6.—Green Bennett, residing here, had a close range encounter with a mother bear on Spruce Mountain. He shot a cub, which bawled, and the mother rushed to the cub's defense. A small dog with Bennett worried the bear long enough to give Bennett a chance to retreat to shooting range and he finally crippled the bear so he could make his escape. The bear was identified as one having killed several sheep on the Robert Raines place near here, dragged them into a pile and half-devoured them.

BOY SHOT, TWO THUGS SOUGHT

Police of several Allegheny Valley towns and townships, and county detectives today were searching for two youthful highwaymen who wounded Emil Silverman, 16, of Ninth avenue, Brackenridge; held two young girls at bay with revolvers as they robbed a barbecue on the Freeport road, and are believed to have robbed two other motorists near Russellton last night.

Silverman was shot through both cheeks, police said, when he refused to stop his automobile in the Bakerstown road at the command of the thugs.

Two young daughters of Joseph Seitz, who conducts a barbecue and gasoline station on the Freeport hill, Freeport road, were forced to turn over approximately $20 when the thugs, who were masked, entered the place shortly after 9 p. m.

UPHOLD LAWS, HOOVER URGES

however, rest upon government officials alone; it must rise from the stern demand and the loyal co-operation of good citizenship and individual responsibility to the community."

The President continued:

"We need the teaching that the foundation of government is rspect for law.

Proper Enforcement

"A quickened interest on the part of the community can insist upon proper enforcement of law.

"You have a post in every town and village. You have it in your power to do much."

Turning to other matters, Mr. Hoover told the veterans:

"The peace of our country has never stood more assured than at this moment."

Citing another section of the legion's constitution, "to promote peace and good will on earth," the President declared that two notable steps have recently been taken by his administration toward the goal of international peace. He mentioned the Kellogg-Briand pact for the outlawry of war, and the London naval treaty.

The President said:

"By the London naval agreement, we have silenced the high dangers of competitive naval building and have safeguarded our defense by parity with the greatest naval power in the world. We have assured the maintenance of an effective navy as the first line of defense. By limiting our strength we have given demonstration to the world that we seek no domination but only adequate defense."

No Imperialism

Some leaders of foreign governments, he said, have suspected the United States of imperialism, of coveting wider boundaries, and wanting to extend its tremendous power into other lands. Of this he declared:

"Such a conclusion would be a logical deduction from many instances during 3,000 years of history, when the exploitation of other people has been the outcome of the ability to do so.

"This, we know, is an utter misconception of America. We know there as a desire to do justice and not exploitation.

"We know there is no financial, traditional or military imperialism in the American heart."

Aid to Veterans

Disabled veterans of the war, the President said, have been pretty well cared for in the matter of hospitalization and rehabilitation. He pointed out that the government outlay for the World War veterans is now running close to $600,000,000 a year. He suggested that the legionnaires had a "peculiar responsibility," to see to it that "the demands on the government should not exceed the measure that justice requires and self-help can provide."

The President praised the efforts of the Legion toward better citizenship, which, he asserted, begins at the ballot box. He said:

"The whole plan of self-government presupposes that the whole people shall participate in the selection of its officials, the determination of its policies and the maintenance of its ideals. Anything less than this involves government by the minority."

Second Speech

Mr. Hoover is the first President who has ever addressed a national convention of the American Legion.

His speech today was the second of the four he is making within a week, as his contribution to the campaign for control of Congress. After addressing the American Federation of Labor later today, the President will depart for Kings Mountain, on the border of the Carolinas, where he will speak tomorrow.

Salvationists Send Pair to Job Parley

Attorney George E. Alter, chairman of the finance committee of the Salvation Army, has appointed E. T. Whiter, vice president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and Henry Russell Miller, president of Crescent Press, to represent the Salvation Army citizens advisory board at a meeting of board representatives of relief organizations to consider the situation created by unemployment. The meeting was called by A. K. Oliver, and will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow in the board room of the Third National Bank.

Almost a quarter of the $112,900 sought by the Army in its home service appeal now in progress has been received or pledged.

Lay Chinese Killing Of Women to Fear

FOOCHOW, China, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—A Kienning, Fukien, dispatch today indicated the bandits who were reported to have killed Miss Edith Nettleton and Miss Eleanor June Harrison, British missionaries, did so because the outlaws suspected they had been betrayed by an intermediary in the ransom negotiations.

Ask Fire Chiefs Aid In Prevention Work

A plea to fire chiefs in Pennsylvania to aid in making fire prevention week a success, was sent to towns having the police teletype today by J. M. Morgan, of the Bureau of Fire Prevention, of the State Police.

MAN DIES, BRIDE HURT IN CRASH

ST. ELMO, Ill., Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Lee Parish, of Tulsa, Okla., who last week married Ann Kennedy, golf star, was killed near here when his car went into a ditch while passing a bus. Mrs. Parish, driving, was injured seriously.

The accident occurred on U. S. Route No. 40, about one mile east of St. Elmo. The open roadster in which the couple was riding was going fast, the bus driver said, and ran off the concrete onto the dirt shoulder and went into a ditch. Parish was thrown out on one side and his wife on the other. Mrs. Parish said they were not going over 40 miles an hour.

NEW IDEA SAVES SILK HOSE

Did you ever realize that it is the oily excretion of the sebaceous glands and rubbing that keep you buying silk hose and lingerie so often? This oil film that next-to-skin garments absorb is destructive to silks, because it softens and rots the fibre. Soap and water alone will not cleanse it out. Only a solvent like Energine cuts it. Add a tablespoonful of Energine to a quart of lukewarm soapy water. Wash thoroughly, rinse well. Note the new cleanliness—the pleasing freshness—see how original color is revived. And all this with far less rubbing. You'll be amazed at difference in results from washing in just soap and water, and your silken hose and undergarments will last longer. And don't forget millions use Energine daily for quick removal of dirt and grease spots from suits, hats, dresses, gloves, shoes. Large can 35c. Get Energine today.

Simple Elegance

In Informal Dinner Gowns

To acquire the elegance of the present period, in a gown which must be basically simple, is an art. And in these frocks it has been done by the latest Paris method of using light beading on chiffon.

The sleeveless frock pictured has a capelet of nude chantilly lace, its pattern outlined with pink beads and rhinestones.

The other model has beading of the tiniest milk beads on its neck and sleeve finishes, which are of ivory chiffon.

Another frock, with long shirred sleeves, has a front and back yoke of white beaded in simulated pearls and crystals.

This new collection in the Women's Finer Dress Section, comes in black, the new browns, navy and bluglory.

Douglas Fairbanks to Do Musical Film With Music by Berlin

By HAL ERICSON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1930, Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 6.

Discussing the trials of producing a talkie musical, Irving Berlin reveals that he has written 20 songs for "Reaching for the Moon," and has discarded all but four.

The composer is cheerful, however, about the decline in the number of screen musicals.

"It brings much greater royalties for hit numbers," he explains. "When every company was producing musicals, the public was so glutted with tunes that a number which ordinarily might sell 40,000 copies, dropped down to about 7,000.

"With fewer tunes, the public buys more of each. 'Little White Lies,' for instance, has sold 450,000 copies in eight weeks."

Douglas Fairbanks has sold 450,000 copies in eight weeks."

Berlin declares that a song properly introduced, and sung all the way through a picture, can be a tremendous success. On the other hand, those which are introduced haphazardly gain little from picture use.

The current Berlin picture will bring Douglas Fairbanks to the screen in a musical, Edmund Goulding, whose touch is one of the surest in the film colony, directs.

NONCHALANT

A local newspaper carried a story this week about a film company that was snow-bound in a terrific blizzard. Food was short, it was said, and the cold extreme.

A final paragraph read: "The studio feels no concern for the stranded actors."

HOW COME?

The thought bobs up that only two prominent actors are known by their initials: H. B. Warner and O. P. Heggie.

EXIT

Two well known players are dropping off the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer list.

Charles King has asked for his release, as the studio has granted his request. He is heading back to Broadway to appear in a musical show. Don't know what.

Charles King

Gwen Lee is the other emigrant. She finishes a five-year contract next Thursday, and thereupon will join the free-lance ranks. Her final role at M. G. M. is in "Inspiration," the new Garbo film.

Some of us have not forgotten what a swell comedy performance Gwen gave in Jack Oakie's "Fast Company."

DISTANCE RECORD

Hollywood's champion commuter is Irving Pichel, who works in Ruth Chatterton's picture. Pichel daily motors from Santa Barbara to the studio, and back again at night, a distance of 100 miles each way.

Ford Visits London, Weary From Tour

LONDON, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Henry Ford, American automobile manufacturer, arrived in London somewhat wearied of the swift pace he has been setting for himself in his tour over Europe.

He remarked to newspapermen, as he and Mrs. Ford stepped from the Continental Express:

"I'm tired. I have been working terribly hard."

He plans to remain here 10 days.

MARINES ON PARADE, JONES ON GALLOP IN THE HARRIS

By MILDRED FILLMORE

Over in the Harris a double-dose of "feature photoplays" is being handed out. Buck Jones goes horse-back riding in the western, "Shadow Ranch," and Alice White goes yacht-riding in "Sweethearts on Parade."

Mr. Jones' gallop is accompanied by some old Bill Hart antics, some old Mack Sennet pies and a lot of Movie West hokum. Bare-headed stands Our Hero by his pal's grave and swears vengeance on the "buzzard" that shot said pal in the back. And need we say he has both vengeance and a girl at fadeout time.

The parading sweetheart exhibition isn't much either. The U. S. Marines are introduced. But even these fellows, supposed to be at home anywhere, seem out of their element.

A free for all fight comes near the end and after that the principals get the sweethearts the script means they should have. Neil Hamilton gets Alice White. Ray Cooke, portraying a goofy gob, gets Marie Prevost. Which is all right by us.

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

Things I Never Knew Till Now

That Sheridan had such disregard for money that he used to stuff banknotes around the window sash to prevent it rattling.

That Swift used to make his birthday a day of mourning.

That the unhappy queen of Henry II used to sign herself "Eleanora, by the wrath of God, Queen of England."

That Handel ate enormously; at a tavern he always ordered dinner for three, and usually left the table hungry.

That Christopher Columbus received about $320 in payment for his discovery of America, which they now say he didn't discover.

That Benjamin Franklin attended school only two years.

That in Granada, Spain, there is a brook called Xenil which has a tide like the sea.

That if you stand under an electric fan in a speakeasy your "beer" will become "flat" that much quicker.

That when America joined the World Tiff it didn't have enough binoculars to see the enemy and had to borrow them from those willing to loan them to the Government, half of which weren't returned.

That the country with the highest literacy rate is Sweden, where it is 97 per cent. In the U. S. it only is about 78 per cent, you dope!

That Southey, when too feeble to read his books, kissed them.

That it was Oscar Wilde who originated the name "the Divine Sarah" for Sarah Bernhardt, who was a good actress, too, Ethel.

That they are using cotton cloth as road material in Texas and S. Carolina, along with asphalt, of course.

That the only thing we are having an increased production of this year is ignorance. 18,000 more college students, frixample.

That in Algeria a husband can get rid of his wife by merely saying: "Lissen here, you. I divorce you!"

That in East Africa a man can buy a frau for three dollars—and on the installment plan at that!

That when you have a summons to serve—put it under the victim's arm if he will not take it in his paw. Most judges do not consider mere flicking the coat or arms of the victim sufficient service.

That Heron, the ancient Greek, invented the "slot machine," which squirted sacred water after a five drachma piece was inserted.

That the largest flagstone on Vth Avenue, New York, is in front of the Cornelius Vanderbilt mansion at 640—or don't you care?

That in Scotland a "Dead-End" street is one with a toll bridge at the end of it.

That stage door Johns are now called "Chorushers."

That the Pennsylvania rails between New York and Chicago weigh 120 lbs. per yard. Thirty lbs. heavier than most railroads use.

That in the hinterland Standard Time is called "God's Time" by the farmers, who would rather go to bed an hour later than get up in the dark. Miss Guinan is like those farmers, by the way.

That it is not the voltage that kills electric chair victims.

That new shoes can easily be broken in by creasing them with the side of a pencil the first time you put them on.

That women's brains are proportionately heavier than men's, but that is no sign of intelligence.

That a thing of beauty has a boy forever.

That it was Henry van Dyke who said the surest way to be artificial is to try to be natural according to some other man's receipe.

That in Brooklyn you will find a Doctor Stork.

That Shakespeare played the part of the Ghost in "Hamlet" and that of Adam in "As You Like It." He created 700 characters.

That more people remember injuries than benefits.

That Napoleon Bonaparte, himself one of the better gossips of his time, first chirped about "washing dirty linen at home."

That it was Aeschylus who created drama, having introduced a second actor, thus changing recitation into dialogue.

That Walter Scott wrote anonymous reviews of his own books.

That Julius Caesar scratched his head with one finger.

NEW FULTON LATEST ADDITION TO OUR SHOW LIFE

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

A new motion picture theater is open to Pittsburghers. It is the Fulton in Sixth street. Though in reality, an old playhouse, it has been practically made into a new one. And, in this connection, praise is due to the M. A. Shea and Hyde and Behman interests, under which it operates. This is a co-partnership of men who have attained success in theatrical enterprises. Their extravagant expenditure of money in bringing the new Fulton into being is, among other things, an expression of confidence that Pittsburgh is a real theater city.

The Fulton has been fixed up quite grandly. New plush chairs are in the orchestra and balcony—1,900 of them. They are comfortable. A decorative scheme of jade and silver is carried out. Chandeliers of crystals dazzle the eye. Heavy carpet adorns the lobby and the aisle-ways.

BRIGHT LIGHTS BLAZE

Bright lights blaze before the theater. The furnishings in the lobby are attractive. Some of the individual furniture pieces cost as much as $1,000, we are told. We listen respectfully. It is the exploitation man speaking.

The theater is devoted exclusively to film entertainment. Modern sound equipment has been installed. And by sound and sight the screen is accessible to every seat.

The opening bill features the Paramount talkie, "Manslaughter." It is based on the Alice Deur Miller story, which was seen as a silent picture some time back. Cecil B. DeMille made the silent version and Thomas Meighan and Leatrice Joy were in the leading roles.

HEROINE "WISES UP"

The current version features Claudette Colbert and Frederick March. The story is that of a rich society girl, who speeds along in her motor car. Reckless and selfish, she thinks she is the only pebble on the beach—or rather person on the road. But when she kills a policeman and is prosecuted by the district attorney, who happens to be her sweetheart, she begins to "wise up."

The new Fulton, like some of the other theaters of our town, promises to be a haven for a certain class of theatergoers—motion picture fans who are wearied by masters of ceremonies who smile and groups of girls who dance.

And we welcome the Fulton Theater. Competition, not compensation, is the law of life. In the show business, anyway.

Trouser Pockets Yield Thieves $23

Thieves last night entered the home of C. H. Sare, 5509 Margaretta street, through a kitchen window, and stole $23 from Sare's pockets, according to a police report.

Convict

Claudette Colbert is convicted by her sweetheart, who is district attorney in "Manslaughter," opening picture in the new Fulton.

JOHN P. KLEMAN DEAD AT 69

John P. Klemans, 69, owner for many years of Kleman's Inn, well-known East Liberty cabaret, died in Pittsburgh Hospital yesterday.

Mr. Kleman had been brought to Pittsburgh from his summer home in Claire, Mich., about a week ago when his condition demanded hospital treatment.

For many years, he had been prominent in East Liberty political and business circles, interested in a number of civic projects.

He leaves, besides his widow, Mrs Nellie Hutchison Kleman, a sister, Miss Anna C. Kleman, and a brother, John K. Hull.

Funeral services will be held in the T. B. Moreland funeral home, Highland avenue, at 3 p. m. Wednesday. Interment will be private.

MUCH TOO GOOD TO BE WITHOUT

A triumphant feeling . . . for you sense the very first time you use PEBECO, the "iced" dentifrice, that it is working. Pebeco's tang is significant—none of your wishy-washy tastes here. It is like a bit of ice in your parched mouth on a sweltering day. You get something of the shock, the thrill — and you know that while cleaning and whitening the teeth, Pebeco is giving a sense of mouth exhilaration you've never before enjoyed. Try it a week . . it's too good to be without.

Why A&P prices for good food are low

A & P has millions of customers all over the country, and more customers are coming to A & P stores every day because they find there the good food they want at prices they know to be as low as is possible to a going business.

There is no secret about this. Like everyone else in business, A & P buys goods to sell them at a profit. A & P's unusual success is due to two facts:

(1) A & P buys the best wherever the best can be bought at greatest advantage to A & P customers; (2) A & P sells the best for only a little more than the best costs—plus selling expense. It can do both these things because so many people buy in its stores.

These people know that A & P passes on to them all the saving when prices fall at the sources of supply, retaining, under all conditions, no more than its regular profit—2½ cents in the dollar.

"Just a few words of praise of your medicine. Nothing gave me relief and health as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did. I am a practical nurse and was so rundown that I was unable to work. I used to suffer agonies at times and would have to lie down the biggest part of the day. After two bottles of Vegetable Compound I felt better. Now I have used ten bottles and feel fine. I recommend it to many of my patients."—Mrs. Florence Johnson, R. R. #3, Chetopa, Kansas.

GENERAL PERSHING, OTHER NOTABLES SPEAK IN RADIO PROGRAMS TONIGHT

The Loudspeaker

"London Calling."
Shaw and Kipling.
English Sports.
Mr. Hohenzollern.

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—It was only a year and a half ago that a group of listeners, hastily summoned to the N. B. C. studios in the upper, if not uppish, regions of Fifth avenue, were startled to hear a musical program originating in London.

Louis Reid

As they sat around a radio on the winter afternoon — it was night in England — they heard the faint notes of a symphony band in Queen's Hall. They heard an announcer after a painful pause declare with placid accent so characteristic of Englishmen on the air:

"This is London calling."

The magical phrase, so suggestive of the romance and mystery of London—it is infinitely superior in the mood it creates to our casual matter-of-fact, "this is Station XYZ, New York"—stirred the little group deeply. It was their first adventure on a trans-Atlantic radio journey. They had—most of them at any rate—regarded such an adventure as too remote, too unusual for any substance other than dreams.

London Calls Often On Loudspeakers

In a year and a half the remote and unusual have become the commonplace. Not only is London calling regularly, but Holland and Germany often penetrate the ears of the republic. Traditional music of these countries has reached our armchairs and when the fiddles have been silenced the voices of her distinguished men have come into the parlors.

Despite the frequency of the international broadcasts there is still something of the spectacular, something of the magical about them that make them among the most desired programs on the microphonic menu. The King has given us his clear and precise English. The Prince of Wales has suggested some of his jauntiness on the air. MacDonald has sent to our ears his poetic fervor, his evangelistic eloquence. We have heard Snowden and Cecil and Churchill and Baldwin and Lady Astor—in fact, most of England's politically prominent with the sole and strange exception of Lloyd George.

It seemed for months as if the cocked ears of America were to hear nothing but politics across the sea. We became fed up with parity and parliament. The Columbia System, noting our weariness, dispatched ambassadors to England to ferret out her men of letters, her scientists and journalists—such men as Sir John Masefield and Sir Oliver Lodge. And the N. B. C., with an eye on the twitching feet of America, began to schedule jazz bands from the London night clubs. Today London on the air is almost as varied as New York.

Shaw and Kipling Yet to Be Heard

We should like to see the magnificences of the microphone lead England's great literary quartet to the loudspeakers—Shaw and Kipling and Wells and Barrie. And they might bring up for reserves Galsworthy and Arnold Bennett. For a dramatic interlude there is Forbes-Robertson. And there is, too, the head of Scotland Yard. What a breathless tale for a winter night he might tell, though detectives, for some inexplicable reason, are among the most yawn-inspiring of radio speakers.

* * *

There are other symbols of English life—hundreds of them—that might lift their voices to America. What of that fabulous figure, the London tailor? What of the prettiest of the barmaids, the more enterprising of the pub keepers, the bobbies who direct traffic in Piccadilly Circus, the butcher who serves the royal household, the myriad hosts of merchants whose windows bear the legend "By appointment to his Majesty, George V?"

* * *

The outstanding English sports event—the Derby at Epsom Downs—reached American ears for the first time this year. And while its broadcast was lacking in emotion, while it had none of the excitement and enthusiasm of our average contest on the radio, there was, by gad, accuracy and there was—another by gad, printer!—thoroughness. The English, when it comes to sports broadcasts would far rather be right than exciting.

* * *

Turning to Holland and Germany—the only other countries that are now within calling distance—we would give our good ear to hear the Kaiser. To get his statement first hand, to know what he thinks about in the long, dreary days at Doorn, would be a lure to the cushions as potent as it is irresistible.

Let Us Have Soon Mr. Hohenzollern

And we have an idea that the Kaiser will talk if given an opportunity by the field marshals of the microphone. He knows the publicity value of radio or he knows nothing at all. Let the broadcasters lead him to the loudspeaker.

Gen. Pershing

Lord Southborough, James M. Beck, A. W. Robertson, John F. Miller and other speakers at the George Westinghouse memorial banquet in the William Penn Hotel are to be heard over KDKA at 8:30 tonight. Milton J. Cross is to be the announcer. Gen. John J. Pershing's talk to the American Legion Convention at Boston is to be broadcast by WCAE at 10 o'clock. "Cortege" from the famous opera, "Queen of Sheba" opens the Minneapolis Symphony concert over WJAS at 9.

Anthony Wons, who conducts Tony's Scrap Book"—WJAS at 6:45—received 100,000 fan letters in one winter when at WLW.

"Little White Lies" and "Sing Something Simple" are specialties on the General Motors concert, WCAE at 9:30.

Norman Brokenshire, master of ceremonies on the Van Heusen and Radio Follies at Columbia System studios received a ticket for parking one night recently.

* * *

When his name was called, Brokenshire responded meekly. The judge eyed him frowningly and said: "You have the same name as the radio announcer, haven't you?"

"I am the announcer," said Brokenshire.

"If that is true let the court hear you announce," said the judge.

After Mr. Brokenshire had given his familiar "How do you do, ladies and gentlemen, how do you do," the judge rapped for order and said:

"Very fine, very fine. In fact, $5 fine!"

Don Bestor dressed up "My Man" so that we hardly recognized him in Saturday night's broadcast. A beautiful arrangement.

The Noon Luncheon Club with Albert is to be resumed tomorrow.

It was the eighth inning yesterday before McNamee interrupted the World Series broadcast for a few seconds to tell us that it was being transmitted by NBC. Sponsors of other programs might take the hint.

Jessica Dragonette broke all records at the radio show. Thirty-one thousand people paid to see and hear this beautiful NBC star.

She was sweeter than ever.

Jessica is a titian with grey eyes, an intellectual, an artist far above the average.

She's psychic, reads a great deal, philosophizes a lot. Her psychology is practical.

Most of her time is spent studying music and preparing for her broadcasts. She likes baseball, played forward on her high school basketball team, helps her partner a lot in bridge—but has never seen a football game!

Something must be done about that.

Her fine attributes, aggressive nature and delightful personality make her "Radio's Princess."

We learned Saturday that Jessica and Mathilde Flinn sang together in Canadian light opera a few years ago.

They had a grand reunion at Marjorie Stewart's "Microphone Playhouse."

QUESTION A DAY:

Joan Lang, Beltdhoover—Who writes the script for Detective Story over WJAS?

Answer—Bill Sweets, former newspaperman, does Detective Story as well as Mary and Bob.

President Hoover's talk at the sesqui-centennial celebration of the Battle of King's Mountain in south Carolina, is to be broadcast tomorrow at 2:30 by KDKA and WCAE. We'll also hear what the Governor of North Carolina says to the Governor of South Carolina.

CHURCH EDIFICE CONSECRATED

Members of the congregation and officials of the borough were present when the First Presbyterian Church of Coraopolis was formally opened yesterday. The structure has been completed at a cost of $115,000. Three services yesterday marked the beginning of a week's program. The Rev. E. B. Welsh, pastor, presided.

A consecration service was held yesterday morning with the Rev. Dr. Jesse L. Cotton, of the Louisville Theological Seminary, a former pastor of the church, preaching the sermon. Prior to the sermon George H. Minch, chairman of the building committee, turned over the keys of the building to J. T. Butler, president of the board of trustees.

A community fellowship meeting took place at 3 o'clock with Dr. W. L. McEwan, president of the presbytery's board of trustees, delivering the principal address. Last night the Rev. Dr. W. R. Van Buskirk, of Marshall, Mo., a former pastor, delivered a sermon. Dr. Charles Heinroth, organist of Carnegie Music Hall, will give a recital on the new organ tonight.

MISS HARD-BOILED

By JANE DIXON

Jerry Helps Pancho in Business Venture

CHAPTER LXXI.

Raquel, stepping from her car, entered a shop on Fifth avenue. Her black eyes took no cognizance of the stream of fashion that flowed there.

It was the first time she had been in Chez Alphonse since her return. No idle curiosity sent her to this foyer of her realized dreams. Her return was a pilgrimage.

"I'd like to see your hats," she told the elegant young woman with the coppery hair who hurried forward to receive her.

"If you will step this way—" the coppery young woman paused.

"Something in black velvet," Raquel said, "with white paradise."

"Why, Mademoiselle Raquel!" The coppery young woman exclaimed. She was a flutter of excitement.

"I'm not a ghost," Raquel said, almost as flustered as the coppery young woman herself. "And I was only joking about the paradise. Just select whatever you think I would like. Some Reboux. I like Reboux."

The young woman was in such a state she forgot her mincing away as she hurried in the direction of the screen at the front of the shop.

Inquiries for Her

That screen. Madame Pauline. What had become of Madame Pauline? She dared not ask. Something inside her quivered and stopped. Madame Pauline was not there. She was out somewhere in the vast void.

Even the husk of the flower Alphonse had plucked out and tossed aside was less than the dust. But the humming-bird hummed on.

She had kept her pledge to Madame Pauline, made that night the frenzied woman had come to her in the Hotel Brixton and pleaded for the safeguarding of a love the older woman never possessed. Raquel had never been more than a medium for the expression of Alphonse's art. She had never opened her petals for his plundering. Would she have done so had it not been for Jerry?

She selected a hat and ordered it sent to her.

"You are more beautiful than ever," the coppery girl told her. There was neither grudge nor guile in the simple statement. "We have been wondering about you—often," the young woman went on. "Of course, we knew of your marriage."

"I've been too busy to think of clothes," Raquel said.

Busy doing what? Being with Jerry. She hadn't bought anything since she left Paris. Only a few odds and ends, necessities, picked up without thought.

"We have lots of inquiries about your models—the ones you favor personally," the young woman said. "There's a Mrs. Carrington who keeps asking for you. She was Mrs. Dexter when you knew her. Her new husband is a Senator from Utah. And Mrs. Bosart—she drives us crazy. She's in mourning. Her husband died—in a sanitarium somewhere abroad. She's wearing white. It gives you the shivers."

Life closing in. The tangled threads of it drawing together.

Raquel returned to her car and was driven back to the apartment.

Pancho's Opportunity

Jerry and Pancho were there, full of zealous plans.

"You know that Spanish fellow your father met while we were in Boston?" Jerry reminded her. "Well, he's a fine chap and he's got a good idea."

"Senor Zacado,," said Pancho, impressively.

"If I could pronounce it the way you do, Senor," Jerry laughed, "I'd say it myself."

"What is the plan, Jerry?" Raquel asked, eagerly. It had to do with Pancho, she knew.

"It's this. Zah-cah-do—how's that?—has a shipping business downtown. He deals with Spain. Spanish goods. I've looked him up and he's A1 in every respect. First class financial rating and his business shows a neat profit. All he needs is a little capital to make it a real success. Capital, and a good partner who understands the Spanish needs and temperament."

"But you're not going into business, Jerry. If we're off to the Orient—"

"No, dear. At least not just yet. With you on my hands," Jerry pulled her down beside him. "I'm not going into business. But your father is."

She glanced swiftly at Pancho. He was standing erect, his chest puffed out like an inflated balloon. The Spanish trait of vanity was strong in him again. His pride ran high. Pride, if anything, could save him, now that it was quickened again.

"We've threshed the whole thing out with Zacado," Jerry went on. "Your father is just the man he needs. I'm going to buy him a partnership in Zacado's concern. He'll move the family here to New York and help build that business into a fine little gold mine."

"Already I have found a number of ways," said Pancho.

"Yes," Jerry said. "The suggestions of Senor Rojos were good live ones, and constructive. Zacado wants to adopt them at once. Of course, it will keep both partners hustling for a while. But I have arranged it so that your father will eventually buy back my part of the concern. By allotting a percentage of his profits to the price of purchase."

"And this is as you want it, Pancho?" Raquel asked. She knew her father. He was a zealot in pursuit of those things which pleased him. Jerry must not invest money that Pancho would throw away, toss to the winds of desire and gross appetite.

Raquel Appreciative

"It is the only way, Chico," said Pancho. His voice was strong. His teeth clenched. His face grim. He found an excuse to leave her with Jerry.

"If he should fail us—" Raquel murmured.

"We've got to take the chance," Jerry declared. "I firmly believe he will not fail. The first thing is to keep him away from his old environment. From all contact with the companions of his evil days."

"And this Zacado?"

"He is high-class. The class of your father's family. And he is Spanish. Pancho will not be among strangers. He will be with his own people. I don't know about your mother, though. She may not want to pull up her home by the roots."

"Don't worry about Lucy," Raquel said. "She'll follow wherever he goes. And she'll bless you for giving him the chance, no matter what happens."

"I thought it would be better for the young folks, too, your brothers, your sister."

"Oh, Jerry! Think what it will mean to Jose. He can have the best teachers. You have no idea what he can do with a violin. He caresses it, as if it were a baby. And it speaks with the tongues of angels."

"I thought of that."

"You would, dear Jerry. He will be a great musician. And he will pay you back, a thousand times, for all of us."

His lips covered her hands.

"You have already done that, dear girl," he said. "Just the joy of having you here, like this, beside me, is more than all I could give."

Fay King Ponders Upon Trifling Yet Important Ways of Love

I LOVE THE WAY HE WEARS HIS HAT!
I THINK HE'S THE CUTEST THING!
WE FALL IN LOVE WITH LITTLE FASCINATIONS, AND WE FALL OUT OF LOVE BECAUSE OF LITTLE FAULTS!
FAY-TTING

By FAY KING

We fall in love by concentrating upon adorable trifles. We fall out of love by concentrating upon annoying trifles. Love may grow greater in the face of real affection. But it dies in the face of exasperation.

Lovers have fallen for laughing eyes and stray curls, but they have flown from an adored one who bites her finger nails.

Girls have fallen in love with a man because of his smile or fascinating frown. But they have fallen out of love with him because he jingles coins or chews a toothpick!

A man would like to kiss a girl with a cooing voice, but he would soon like to "kill" one who can say nothing but "You said it!"

Madge Confers, Via Long Distance 'Phone, With Harry

I looked at little Mrs. Train with the dazed feeling which one has when one has been asleep without meaning to fall into slumber.

"Why?" I stammered, "are you sure it's an hour? I thought I just closed my eyes."

She laughed, then looked abashed, as if she feared she might have offended me. She made me think of a shy woodbird, this pretty, prim little woman. I hastened to make amends.

"I'm sorry. Of course, I realize now," I said. "I've been asleep ever since I sat down here. My niece would say it was a good joke on me. I was so sure that I could not sleep. But it's all the fault of your armchair. It's the most comfortable chair I ever sat in."

The little woman glowed.

"It is comfortable," she admitted shyly. "I often take a nap in it myself. "Do you want to telephone now?"

Her head moved ever so slightly toward the next room and I read the unconscious movement with amused sympathy. She had spent her married life trying to keep pace with her energetic, bustling husband and generally found herself a step behind. But there was no unhappiness in her tardiness, for there was in Mr. Train's eyes—anyone could see it—the warm affection which was his for the little wife who patiently "cushioned all the corners" for him. But it was not in her creed to delay him in anything. He had arranged to have me telephone now, and telephone I must.

"Yes," I replied. "I will come at once."

I walked beside her into the next room to find Mr. Train already seated by the telephone.

"If you'll just give me your number," he said briskly, "I'll get it for you. Then you can have the room undisturbed while you talk."

He was the essence of helpfulness and of tactfulness, and I scored myself for the slight irritation I felt at being treated like a small child who could not manipulate a long-distance telephone call. I was able, however, to thank him smilingly and give him the data of my message.

"It is a particular person call," I said. "The name is Underwood, Harry Underwood, Suite—the Hotel—New York telephone"—I gave him the number. "Mrs. Graham calling."

He already had taken down the receiver and when I had finished he spoke without delay into the mouthpiece.

"Long distance," he said crisply, waited a few seconds, and then repeated the call I had given him. The next instant he hung up the receiver.

"She will call us," he said, "as soon as she gets the party. You'd better go back to your comfortable chair. I'll answer the 'phone and call you if your party is ready. There are always so many delays on a long distance, sometimes I have known them to call me to the telephone five times only to tell me that they are 'trying to complete the call.'"

"I know," I said, for this particular idiosyncrasy of telephone procedure is an irritating mystery to me. "But I feel that I ought not to burden you with this detail. I can easily sit there and attend to it."

"I prefer it this way," he said with a finality that sent me back meekly to my chair in the front room, where I sat tensely while Mr. Train answered ring after ring, listening patiently to the repeated assurance from the operator that she was attending to the call. Finally I heard his voice say: "Mr. Underwood? Just a second. Mrs. Graham wishes to speak to you."

I was at the threshold of the other room before he had finished speaking, and a second later heard Harry Underwood's voice saying tensely: "Everything else will keep. How's Lil?"

"In wonderful condition, considering everything," I answered.

"Was it pretty trying'?' His voice was raucous, husky. "But of course, it was. You needn't tell me. Are you sure she's all right?"

"She will be all right when she gets home to you," I said slowly. "You are all she needs just now."

I heard his sibiliant breath. "Could I talk to her?"

"She's asleep," I told him. "But—"

"No!" he exploded. "Don't disturb her for anything. But how is it you are in Kingston, and how in thunder did that black roadster chap find you?"

"I don't know, but the fact remains that he did, that he stayed at the Hasbroucks last night, that he trailed us to Kingston, where he lost us, thanks to the clever work of Mr. Hasbrouck and his friend, Mr. Train, of Kingston, at whose house we now are."

"Where's the black roadster now?"

"On his way to New York, trailed by Mr. Hasbrouck's son on a motorcycle. If the boy does not telephone in an hour from now he will have been gone two hours and we shall understand that the man is nearing New York, and we shall start for the city by the west route. The man went over the ferry to the Peekskill side. What do you think we'd better do when we get near the city—say to Englewood?"

Mr. Underwood's reply was not delayed an instant.

"Stop there and telephone me again. Of course, the fellow's headed back to the hotel. I'll be on the watch for him and see what persuasive methods will do."

His voice was grim, but an instant later it mellowed into tenderness.

"Take care of Lil and give her my love," he said. "So long!"

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND.

The Ties That Bind

At 20 we think that the most wonderful and desirable thing in the world is freedom.

At 30 we begin to see vaguely that the most important and vital things in life are TIES.

* * *

Most men and many women spend their youth in trying to escape ties, or dodge ties. Home ties, family ties—and, above all, marital ties!

Ties mean self-sacrifice and responsibilities. Ties restrict your liberty, interfere with your amusements, and sometimes deflate your pocketbook. Ties may be a spur to your ambition—or a hobble, holding you back.

* * *

Yet the bleakest, emptiest and most pathetic life on earth is that of the man or woman who has not a TIE in the world! The man or woman whom nobody needs. The man or woman who is responsible for nobody's happiness and necessary to nobody's existence.

* * *

Why do widows and widowers and divorcees remarry? Why do people marry at all?

Men struggle to free themselves from ties—and then go right out and tie themselves up with somebody else. Women rush off to Paris or Reno, feeling that they will choke unless "the ties that bind" are cut, yet before the ink is dry on the decree they are signing again on the dotted line.

* * *

Tied! That's what! Yet few men have to marry in order to get a cook or a housekeeper in these days of bachelor flats, apartment hotels, clubs and Japanese cooks. And few women have to marry in order to acquire a provider in these days of good jobs, professions, beauty parlors and tearooms.

Kisses are as free as the air at a filling station and love comes in a hundred assorted varieties of imitations. NOBODY need be lonely or bored any more.

Then what in the world do people go right on marrying for? For TIES, dear heart! For somebody to share things with; somebody to take care of; somebody to work for; somebody who NEEDS them!

The untied man or woman is not orientated. He (or she) has no vital or definite reason for "carrying on." No base from which to work out life. No particular goal—and no particular incentive. "He travels fastest who travels alone——" —but what has he got when he gets there?

One reason why women—even self-supporting, successful

women—are so much more anxious to marry than men are is because they are so much WISER than men. Their intuition and their hearts tell them that a life without TIES is only half a life. And half a life is not better than none!

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Tuesday, October 7

A generally hazardous and devastating state of affairs is read from the prevailing lunar and mutual configurations. An entirely unforeseen change, of far-reaching consequence, is likely to be precipitated, involving change of employment as well as environment. It may also unhappily affect the personal relations. And, while the situation is stubbornly adverse, yet the always unfathomable denouements of Uranian activities lend color to the hope that there may be pleasant surprises in store.

Those whose birthday it is must be assured that they stand at the brink of the unknowable, with the prospect of sudden and unpredictable changes of quite radical importance. Doubtless change of employment and environment are inevitable, all precipitated by a tendency to restlessness and roving, and possibly by ill health. The personal affiliations are likewise imperiled. And yet the element of the uncertain may carry a happy surprise as well.

A child born on this day may be inclined to be nervous, restless, changeable and uncertain, although probably talented and skillful. It will be unconventional, unorthodox and difficult to keep within metes and bounds

Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Tight hat bands will produce wrinkles in the forehead. By pressure on nerves and blood streams, they will cause headache. Snug chapeaux incites the scalp to perspire and produce too much oil; the hair suffers from depression and exhaustion. Tight hats and tight shoes put beauty out of form.

If a woman is to put up a good fight against the havoc wrought by the whiskered gentleman with the scythe she must carry on a policy of preparedness. By the lavish use of cold water and a heavy tissue cream she can keep the complexion from falling into cutaneous plaitings. By having regard for proper posture she can stave off rounded shoulders for at least 100 years—after that she won't care. She must not eat too much or too little; she must mind her emotions and not have tantrums, and she must draw fresh air freely into her lungs.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

There's No Percentage in Being a Neglected Heroine!

Here he is at last—the aeroplane villain!

Also Mary, who sits at home, chewing her nails and weeping big, wet tears of self-pity, while her Hero does his solo flights.

Is Mary getting a square deal from Paul? Ask her! His time he spends skyhootin'. His cash he spends on Big Times with Swell People. All she gets are his hangovers! Yet she's crazy about him

Why does she let him get away with it? Is she homely? Unpopular? No indeedy. She's pretty as a peach and peppy as a pup. And before she knew him, she had flocks of friends. Then what ails her? She thinks it's love. So, day after day, she sits scorching in her little home made hell, humbly waiting for him. And, I suspect, getting a big bang out of being a neglected heroine.

"Dear Sally Martin—

"I've been reading your column for a long time now, and I've seen so many problems solved in it that I am coming to you with mine.

"I am only 18, but I have the experience, and look as old, as if I were 25. I was always very attractive and smart looking, and had lots of dates, considering the fact that I started to go out, unknown to my mother, just before I was 14.

"I drank—and plenty—with the men, laughed and joked with them, and was considered a "good sport" and patted myself on the back for being treated with a lot of respect, because, regardless of the hour I got home, or how much liquor I consumed, I was always a good girl.

"Then I fell in love. Head over heels. And with someone outside of my circle. When I did that, I immediately lost what I had prided myself on keeping. I consented of my own free will, and have been having an affair with this man, Paul, for the last seven months. Sally, I love him beyond all conception. I'm the type that loves madly and wholeheartedly, but I know that he has no intention of marrying me . . . or anyone else. He isn't the marrying kind. He loves me and is very true to me, but that is all. He goes away week-ends and leaves me in the city, claiming he 'can't take me because he is the guest of someone else.' Even if he could take me, he wouldn't, because he doesn't want a woman with him on these trips. He's a golf enthusiast and has his own airplane. And he wants all his time to himself. But he expects always to see me during the week.

"Of course, in the evening while he's away, there are plenty of girls, because he goes to very fashionable places, among swell people. He'll take them out and spend plenty of money on them, and then come back broke and so tired that he can't take me out.

"Now, Sally, this man has done nothing . . . absolutely nothing, for me. Not that I want to be mercenary, but whenever he settles down to business and makes some money, he spends it on himself.

"I'd be so happy if only he'd share things with me sometimes.

"I just can't figure out what to do. I love him so that I don't want to lose my head and walk out. I feel as though the whole world would tumble and my heart would break, if I did that. After all, he's my first love, and every little thing would remind me of him. I know he loves me. He sees very few other women, but it's this week-end business I can't understand, and which is making me so terribly unhappy.

"I feel that being so young, I'm not wasting my time, and should grasp the opportunity of a few happy years, yet I don't want to realize all of a sudden that I can't live without him, then find him tiring of me. Gee! I'm so afraid of that kind of darkness. I've had a lot of 'crushes' on boys before, but this is different, because he means so much to me? What should I do? Why is he like this? "MARY."

Why does he act that way?

That's simple, sister! He acts that way because you let him! Yes, I'll admit that he sounds selfish and unfair . . . but just what did you expect, when you allowed yourself to be used for the world's record Easy Mark?

According to your own story, you never demanded this man's respect, or the protection of his name. And I suspect that you never ever demanded that he be an honest-to-goodness man, either. You fell for Eyes .... or Glad Rags .... or a Nifty Line .... or his "Social Position." And so far as I can see, you went out of your way to fall into his arms, just like any ripe plum when the branch is jostled. Why should he put himself out to keep, in good with you, when you threw yourself at his head, gratis? Why shouldn't he leave you to amuse yourself .... or sleep off his binges on your sofa, when he knows you'll stand for it and ask for more?

And you call this one-sided farce "Love." Don't fool yourself, kid. It isn't. It's about as much like love as the measles.

What'll you do? Set some value on yourself .... and give this hunk of roundsteak the air. You may think your heart'll break if you do, but believe me, little girl, if you don't, it'll be broken a lot worse. Get next to yourself and act Regular.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Providing the Bridal Attendants Costumes

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

The other day a question came up in our office as to whether or not it is proper for a bride-to-be to outfit her maid of honor, providing she is financially able to do so. Some say it is proper, and others say it is done for show.

JEAN.

It is not customary for the bride-to-be to furnish the outfit of her attendants. It is proper for her to do so if she wishes to do so, but it is very rarely done, even by a bride who is financially able to do it. Brides of great wealth sometimes do it, but usually they plan to supply only one detail of the costume, usually the hat.

There is no reason why one should accuse the bride of doing this "for show." I think that this is unnecessarily unkind, for the brides that I have known who supplied the costumes of their attendants have done it with a sincere and most kind wish to make it as easy as possible for their attendants. You realize it is a great sacrifice for a girl, who is not overly endowed with money, to buy an expensive costume, and the wealthy bride who is kind and generous will see that it is made easy for her. But this kindness should not be misinterpreted as being of a show-off nature.

A Gracious Reply

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When should one say when she is thanked for coming to see a sick friend or calling her on the telephone? R. G.

You might say, "Thank you for letting me come to see you," or "Thank you for letting me talk with you over the telephone," or "It is such a joy to see you, and to see that you are getting so well," or "I am grateful to you for letting me come to see you, and I am so happy at seeing you so well." "Indeed, it is I who thank you, for you have made me so happy by letting me come."

Don't say what people often awkwardly do say, "You are welcome," or that most cumbersome and terrible of answers to such a thank-you: "That's all right. I was glad to come." Thank the other person for the pleasure that you have had in seeing a friend.

When we learn to observe the sensible rules of hygienic living, and not until then, may we expect to be free from aches and pains. Most of our uncomfortable symptoms come from our own mistakes.

DR. COPELAND

One of the most common of human ailments is sore throat. It may occur in the middle of the summer, or in the coldest months. There are a large number of persons who invariably place the blame for this trouble on bad weather conditions. Nine times out of 10, careful study of the case will show some violation of the rules of hygiene.

Worry, overtiredness from overwork or any other cause, lack of sleep, all cause a lowering of the body's resistance to infection. When in such a condition of decreased vitality, it is perfectly natural to chill easily. This is what happens if the day is damp and cold or in summer if one is suddenly exposed to a draft when overheated.

Chronic constipation is responsible for more ills than almost any other condition that attacks the human body. It is such a common thing that most persons take it for granted. If the intestinal tract is not clean, if it is clogged with waste matter for days and sometimes weeks, this sets up toxic substances which poison the system. When that happens something unpleasant is bound to happen.

Too many persons abuse the stomach with too rich food and to much food. This results in a bodily state which prepares for the condition known as a "cold." Sore throat makes its appearance.

The lower bowel has a delicate lining membrane from which the veins carry the blood almost directly to the liver. These large blood vessels form what is known as the "portal circulation." The function of the liver is to filter out the bacteria and poisons from the blood, poisons which have been picked from the intestinal tract. tract.

Under the ordinary conditions of good health, the liver does its work effectively. But it cannot do the impossible thing. Sometimes, when the poisons have accumulated in too large quantities, they escape into the general blood stream and are carried to other parts of the body.

Given such a condition, if a person were to talk for too long a time, so that the throat muscles were overtaxed, or if a man had smoked too much, the throat would become irritated and congested. It is then that bacteria get in their work. If they lodge in that region the victim would have a sore throat probably

WATER ST. FIRE LOSS $25,000

Damage estimated at $25,000 resulted from a fire early yesterday in the store rooms and offices of the Pittsburgh Garter Company, 131 Water street, which firemen fought for almost two hours.

Hoseman Ralph Coburn, of No. 1 Engine Company, struck on the foot by flying debris, was taken to Mercy Hospital. Al Masalion, hoseman from No. 32 Engine Company, overcome by smoke, was revived at scene.

Originating in the store rooms on the fourth floor, the flames worked their way to the office on the floor below. Firemen, donning gas masks, managed to confine the blaze to the two floors.

County Asked to Aid Delinquent Youths

Declaring Pittsburgh's crime problem to be a youth problem, Cornelius D. Scully, former chairman of the Western Branch of the Pennsylvania committee on penal affairs, today issued an appeal to Allegheny County for funds to improve and extend probation in the United States under the direction of the National Probation Association.

Of the 200,000 children before the courts annually, more than half are denied the help they need because juvenile courts with good probation service are not generally established, he said.

Nova Scotia Swept By Damaging Gale

HALIFAX, N. S., Oct. 6.—(AP.)—A northwest gale, accompanied by heavy rain, which swept Nova Scotia during the week-end, caused extensive damage to the apple crop, disrupted communication and wrought havoc among small craft.

Growers estimated a loss of more than $100,000 as the result of thousands of barrels of ripe apples being torn from the trees in the Annapolis Valley.

Theater Straddles Blue Line, Operates

ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 6.—(AP.)—An Orange blue law puts sin in cinema. Under a statute of 1750, Sunday movies in East Orange are forbidden; in the adjoining town of Orange they are legal—and so a theater that straddles the border was half empty yesterday. But the screen was partly in East Orange.

RAIL TERMINAL WORK STARTS

C. M. Yohe, vice president of the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad, today confirmed a report that the company will start work this week on a $500,000 rail-river transfer on the Ohio River near Monaca. The railroad recently acquired the necessary land for the terminal through purchase of a tract at Colona from the Colonial Steel Company.

Present plans call for the immediate construction of two units, each having a capacity of from 400 to 500 tons per hour. To these will be added additional units as necessity requires. The completed project will cost a half million, it was estimated.

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

by WILLIAM PFARR

With more hullaballoo than ever being made about accidents, and the Safety Congress meeting in great numbers right under our very eyes, we were caught unprepared. We had wanted to say a few words about safety versus recklessness, pointing out the advantages of safety. We are a bit late now, but we want to go on record just the same. We are strongly opposed to accidents. We have no time for those people who advocate accidents. You can always tell a man's character by whether he advocates accidents or safety. Needless to say, or vice versa, it was with deep gratification that we read in the public prints that President Hoover, too, was pro-safety and anti-accidents. President Hoover and Sidwalks are as one in the matter. After all, what good is accomplished by accidents?

However, we protest timidly the safety slogan, which is "Stay Alive." The accidenters are not so weak as to be impressed by such a subtle suggestion. Why not, "Stay Alive or Else"?

However, safety does have its lighter side. We can prove that ponderous statement by telling about something which happened during the convention. There was a smile party one night. If you use your imagination just a bit, you will perceive that a smile party is a party at which one smiles. John Gibson, of the Western Electric Company, went to the smile party, smiled (there were prizes) and went back to his hotel room.

A few minutes later some friends broke in on him with an expensive floor lamp and told him that he had been chosen a winner.

A few other minutes later one of the William Penn's house detectives broke in on Mr. Gibson and asked him to return that lamp to the lobby.

Dear Mister Pfarr:

I suppose you have been wondering why I have not written to you lately. The truth is that the bill collectors seemed to think that I get paid extra for writing for your column and they wanted the extra money. You know Bob Wood, the Reliance Life Insurance publicity man. Well, yesterday I was watching him talking to a man in Wood street. The man was gesticulating with a freshly bandaged right arm and pointing to it. When they got through I walked over and started talking to Bob. He said that the man, A. T. Ninness, one of the company's star salesmen, had tried to light a stove in the basement of his home and it backfired on him and gave him a three-degree burn. While we were talking, along came C. J. Braun, Jr., who as treasurer of the Philadelphia Company is the commander-in-chief of the army that shuts off your gas and light when you don't pay for it. Mr. Braun said that just after he had lit the furnace at his home Thursday night, he noticed that in addition to the burners there was a lot of flame in what would be the ash pit of a coal furnace. He hurriedly turned off the gas and then discovered that he had failed to open up the drafts or something. He said he might have blown up his house. Just then a taxicab whizzed by, fanning my coat tails, and it hit a man and knocked him flat about 20 feet from where we were standing. Now I am not making fun of safety week, but this seemed like an unusual train of circumstances considering what week it is, and I thought you might want to put a piece in your column about it.

Two Killed, 15 Injured in Traffic

SEEK KEY MAN IN KILLING OF 4

PAIR STRUCK BY AUTOS DEAD

Collisions Take Heavy Toll Of Injured; Police Hunt Driver Who Ran Down Man

Two persons were dead today and 15 others were nursing injuries from automobile accidents in the Pittsburgh district.

Injuries suffered when he was struck by an automobile caused the death last night in Homestead Hospital of Mike Sabo, 37, of 898 High street, Munhall. Police ordered Cyrus Faison, of 315 Hawkins avenue, Rankin, alleged driver of the machine, to post bond at the coroner's office today.

A. J. Warden, 65, of 1209 Palo Alto street, North Side, died in Presbyterian Hospital early today from injuries suffered when he was struck by an automobile at North avenue and Arch street last night. Michael Nicoletti, 19, of 914 Grand avenue, alleged driver, was arrested.

TROLLEY, AUTO CRASH

Minor injuries were suffered by six persons when an automobile in which they were riding was struck by a street car at Lincoln avenue and Fremont street, Bellevue, yesterday. The machine, driven by Thomas Kazmer, of 3514 Butler street, was struck by the car, which split a switch, police said. Kazmer's four children, his wife and her sister, whose name police did not learn, were taken to the Suburban General Hospital.

Five persons were injured in the collision of a truck and an automobile at Twenty-third and Sarah streets, South Side. All were treated at St. Joseph's Hospital, where one was held for observation. They were Celton Gongas, 42, of 1832 Fifth avenue, driver of the truck, and Andrew Pastorious, 25, of 89 South Twenty-second street, driver of the automobile, both charged by South Side police with reckless driving; Marie Coleman, 21, of 119 Twenty-first street, and Louise Burre, 21, of 912 Eighth avenue, Homestead, passengers in Pastorious' car, and John Gongas, 10, son of the truck driver. Miss Coleman was held in the hospital for observation.

A man and a woman were injured when the automobile in which they were passengers crashed into a safety zone in Penn avenue near Euclid avenue, late last night. They were Paul Gallicks, 21, or 344 Forty-second street, and Harriet Linski, 21, of 4609 Butler street. Gallicks, although thrown through the windshield, police said, was only slightly injured. Max Grada, 28, of 3301 Bigelow boulevard, driver, was charged by police of East End Station with reckless driving.

MAN HIT, DRIVER FLEES

Frank Sanfic, 47, of 220 First street, Heidelberg, was run down by an automobile at Carson street and Arlington avenue, South Side. At South Side Hospital it was said his legs were broken. The driver of the car disappeared after telling R. C. Mitchell, who picked up the injured man, that he would follow him to the hospital. Police were given the number of the car.

Suffering cuts and bruises when she was struck by an automobile at Penn and Brushton avenues, Lillian Oxerberg, 11, of 63 Caton street, was taken to the Columbia Hospital.

ESTIMATE CITY VOTE 97,000

Registration commissioners today are tabulating returns from Saturday's enrollment, the last of three registration days this year, as registrars in Pittsburgh election districts submit their reports.

Returns made from 348 of the city's 405 districts totaled 35,500 and the commissioners estimated that the final figures would show a registration of about 41,370. The total for the two previous days was about 56,000, indicating an estimated grand total of about 97,000 for this year.

In the last state election of 1926, when nominees were running for United States senator and governor, the total registration was about 91,000, but since then voters have been added to the city's roster by annexation of Carrick, Knoxville, Hays and Overbrook boroughs.

Insurance Leaders Meet Here in 1931

The 1931 convention of the American Life Convention, an organization of 600 insurance executives, will be held in Pittsburgh, T. C. Foley, acting general manager of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, has announced. The chamber extended an invitation to the group and their reply has been received. Foley attended the American Life's recent meeting in Chicago to extend the invitation in behalf of the local chamber.

Master Mysteries

By ARTHUR HOERL

The Bride of Death

CHAPTER I.

"I have an idea, Mr. Bailey." The city editor of the Daily Journal looked up quickly from the stack of proofs on his desk and gazed at Robin Dale with a quizzical expression.

"How much is it going to cost me, Dale?"

"Plenty!" was the laconic reply.

"Where you going, Dale? Europe?"

"No, California."

"Oh, that's it. The Donahue affair . . . but we're getting the International and Associated reports daily . . ."

"They're satisfactory, are they? I thought maybe . . . well, let's forget it."

"Wait a minute, Dale. I know what you thought, and it certainly wouldn't do a paper like the Journal any harm to ferret out the lowdown on that case. Why! we'd . . ."

"Nobody's guaranteeing to ferret it out. I guess sleuths from Bangor to Miami are out there already cluttering up the California landscape. I only thought we should have a personal representative on the job —considerin' they've got a manhunt under way that'll take its place alongside the Taylor and Hickman jamborees."

"You win, Dale. When do you want to leave?"

"I packed up this mornin'—'fore I came downtown."

"Well, I'll be darned!" Bailey laughed aloud. At this unusual sound all work in the editorial office was suspended. No one ever remembered when Bailey did more than smile weakly. A laugh like that must have meant nothing less than a gain of 50,000 circulation.

"With your assurance," Bailey was still grinning, "you ought to own this paper."

"But we'd still need you to run it, Mr. Bailey."

Dale had a way with him, no question of that. Bailey sensed the great compliment behind the reporter's commonplace remark. But there was no other word said about it.

"Better telephone for your ticket. Imagine you'll be taking the Century."

"Already have it, Mr. Bailey," and Dale grinned again. "Already gave Craig a record of the car and berth numbers."

"Say, you, you've probably figured out what this Donahue affair is all about," and Bailey settled back in his chair and glared up at Dale, "and you're taking the trip for a vacation."

"To tell you the truth, I think it can all be traced to the weather . . . . there are so many things the weather is responsible for out here that I wonder they never thought about it."

"You've wasted enough of my time now. Goooby and good luck." The two men shook hands cordially. "And now get the devil out of here"

"Mind if I take a cigaret?" And Dale put his hand into an open carton, took an unopened pack and walked off.

For the best part of five days and four nights Robin Dale spoke to no one except the train barber, the porter, the waiters in the diner and a furniture salesman from Grand Rapids. The salesman, in a state of glorious inebriation, banged into the reporter's berth the first night out of Chicago.

Except for those interludes Dale pondered thoughtfully over a set of newspaper clippings. His fellow passengers probably wondered what fascinating secret the clippings held to keep someone so intently and uninterruptably interested. Their own interest, did they but know it, while more detached, was equally as keen, in the daily newspaper installments of the Donahue case.

In a few days the affair had taken on a national aspect. It had found its way to almost every front page. The mysterious quality of the thing, the very paucity of facts concerning it, the many vague channels which had been opened by the newspaper reports on the actors in the case, had served to stir the imagination or to arouse the morbid curiosity (as the case might be) of countless readers across the length and breadth of the country.

The Donahue case is sufficiently recent so that most readers will remember it quite vividly. For a number of weeks it was featured by the daily press of the entire country. Then, suddenly, it disappeared from the newspaper pages as quickly as it had captured them. In this record, for the first time the solution of the grim mystery surrounding the disappearance of Elsie Carroll, nee Donahue, is given. The reason for keeping it secret, a reason which caused police and press to combine in obtaining silence, no longer exists.

The facts in the case were simple. The very simplicity of the bizarre crime was undoubtedly what staggered the imagination of the country, as well as resisted the utmost efforts of the police to fathom the appalling facts which lay behind it.

Elsie Donahue lived with her widowed mother and a sister, Louise, in a small cottage in Van Nuys, a suburb of Los Angeles, situated at the head of San Fernando Valley. The family was quite poor and existed for a number of years upon the small income Elsie received as a clerk at Madrins, a large department store in the downtown portion of the city. At the time of her disappearance Elsie Donahue was 24. She had gone to work at 16.

Only one unusual incident stood out in the otherwise prosaic existence of the Donahues. Like many another Southern California family they had been enticed by glib-tongued realty salesmen into the purchase of two lots. This was early in the career of Elsie. The Donahues hoped, like many other poor, misguided homeseekers, that some day they might build a home of their own on those lots. But a strange thing happened. The lots were located in a barren spot called Santa Fe Springs. When Elsie was 23 oil was discovered on the adjoining property. The net result was that Elsie Donahue became the possessor of a $5,000-a-week income.

So much for the family.

About Elsie herself. For a number of years she "kept company" with Fred Wagner, a poor lad of vague antecedents, who worked as an orange-picker on one of the valley groves. She was also known to have gone out occasionally with Edward Norcross, a floorwalker at Madrins. Norcross was believed to be quite smitten with Elsie. Then, after blossoming forth overnight as a lady of wealth, she met and became enamored of Roy Carroll, a teller at one of the branches of the Bank of Sicily.

After six months of hectic courtship, during which both Fred Wagner and Edward Norcross figured at intervals, Elsie announced her engagement to Roy Carroll. In view of the impending wedding she built and completely furnished a beautiful home on a hillside overlooking the Pacific at Laguna Beach.

Laguna Beach is sixty miles south of Los Angeles. The wedding took place in February. It was the sixth day of the month. The entire wedding party proceeded to Laguna Beach to celebrate the occasion at the new home. In the party were Fred Wagner and Edward Norcross.

They arrived in automobiles. Elsie Carroll was the first to enter the new home. From the moment she put her foot inside the previously untenanted house she was never seen again. There was one vague report that Fred Wagner had seen her running out of the house, later, after a fruitless search for her. Wagner ran after her. All the others followed.

But Fred Wagner was never able to confirm this, for he disappeared as mysteriously and completely as Elsie Carroll had!

It was exactly eight days after these strange happenings that Robin Dale alighted at Los Angeles and immediately took a local train to Laguna Beach. Up to that time no clue of any kind had been unearthed as to the whereabouts of Elsie Carroll or Fred Wagner. The yacht upon which Elsie and her husband were to have sailed on a honeymoon trip to the South Seas, the day following the wedding, still rode at anchor in the bay near Laguna.

Unquestionably Elsie Carroll had met with foul play. But how, by whom, or where her body was the police had not the slightest notion.

Such was the premise which had brought Robin Dale over three thousand miles.

BRADDOCK'S RUM FEUD PUZZLES

Coroner McGregor Calls Crimes 'Racket Murders'; Plan Victims' Funerals

City and county authorities today combined their efforts to learn the real identity and whereabouts of Arturo Lamorte, who, they believe, holds the key to the four Braddock racket murders Saturday.

Following the finding of the murder car it was learned tags had been issued to Lamorte at a Friendship avenue address. Detectives believe the address was a blind.

SEEN WEEK AGO

The man known as Lamorte last was seen a week ago in the Bloomfield district. Detectives reason that Lamorte engaged the room for the purpose of recording that address with the motor vehicle registrar.

City detectives offer the theory that Lamorte was "taken for a ride" in his own machine, and that the killers used the machine for the Braddock murders to implicate Lamorte.

VICTIMS' FUNERALS

Funeral arrangements for the victims, Mrs. Mary Lobianco, 22, wife of one of the proprietors; her husband, Joseph, 42; his brother, Carmen Lobianco, 37, of Wilkins Township, and Louis T. Tomano, 69, a customer, of 618 Margaretta street, Braddock, were being made today by relatives.

FIND STILL

Belief that the Lobiancos were engaged in bootlegging was strengthened, Braddock police said, when a still was discovered in the home of Carmen Lobianco. The still, according to police, was of 500-gallon capacity.

TRIBUTES PAID TO DAVIDSON

Tribute to the memory of Dr. William M. Davidson, for many years superintendent of schools, was paid by Dr. A. E. Winship, editor of the "Journal of Education," Boston, speaking at a vesper service attended by hundreds in Carnegie Music Hall last night. A brief address also was made by the Rev. Dr. Percival H. Barker, pastor of Point Breeze Presbyterian Church. Dr. Winship said in part:

"The special test of Dr. Davidson's wisdom and devotion to city education in Pittsburgh was his relation to donors of large means, supplementing, but never supplanting public support. Every gift was for the professional benefit of teachers or the enrichment of personality of children and youths. In no other city have so many teachers, for so many years, enjoyed such abundant opportunities for professional study and such liberal terms with such flexibility of arrangements. In no other city have so many teachers, for so many years, had the luxury of travel and recreation on such liberal terms, with such freedom in planning therefor.

"For thirteen years Dr. Davidson, his official board, his official associates, principals, and teachers, led American cities in creative education."

Doctor Thinks Farnsworth Ended Own Life

CHAPTER XXXVII.

The afternoon papers had it.

There were pictures of Alfred A. Farnsworth, and his wife, Catherine, on every front page. One picture of Cathie coming down the steps of the home of the late A. A. Farnsworth with Inspectors Horgan and Bidwell, was enlarged to four columns.

It showed a very small, very slim girl all in black, lifting tragic, despairing eyes to an interested world. Her golden hair showed blurred and curling, against the black of her small, drooping hat.

"That Alfred A. Farnsworth, well known engineer, who was found dead at his home, 2870 Presidio Terrace, at an early hour this morning with a bullet hole through his head, may not have been suicide is the belief of police, this afternoon.

"Experts, amongst them C. O. Galway, noted criminologist, state that it would have been physically impossible for the late Alfred Farnsworth to have fired the fatal shot himself.

"The widow, a bride of six months, is being held at the city jail for questioning. Before her marriage to the elderly, wealthy engineer, she was a Miss Catherine Paige, of this city, formerly employed by Farnsworth as a stenographer. Her home was at 29 Clara street.

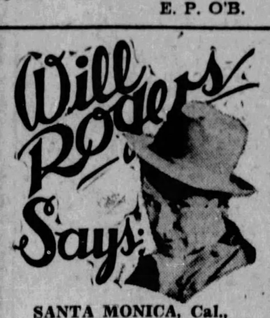
Stage Star Shot Chasing Thief Rejoins Show

Bill Robinson, star of "Brown Buddies," Negro musical show at the Nixon Theater last week, was back with the show in New York today nursing a bullet wound in the left arm suffered when shot by mistake by a policeman during a chase of a purse snatcher in the Hill District early yesterday.

Robinson ran from Bailey's Hotel, at 1533 Center avenue, to the aid of a woman whose purse had been snatched by a Negro at Center avenue and Crawford street, early yesterday. With the gold plated revolver presented him by the New York City Police Department, Robinson pursued the Negro in Watson street. Patrolman Michael Horan, notified of the theft, joined in the chase. Unaware Robinson was chasing the thief, Horan ordered them to halt. One of the two shots fired by Patrolman Horan struck Robinson.

The stage star, 52, was taken to Mercy Hospital where it was discovered that the wound was not serious. Departing for New York last night, Robinson said he held no ill feeling towards the policeman, and commended him for his alertness.



SANTA MONICA, Cal., Oct. 6.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

I don't know whether my old friend, Knute Rockne, and Notre Dame are going to win the world's championship again this fall or not. But he deserves it if they don't win another game. For they are the only big team in the U. S. that starts playing tough teams right from the jump.

These others play Rotary clubs and business colleges till about Thanksgiving, then have one tough game. Knute thinks if you have a football team, it ought to be a football team from the Fourth of July to Christmas.

I told the Athletics all the time not to win their pennant if St. Louis won theirs.

Yours,
WILL.

Dr. Ewers in Good Will Plea Praises Catholics

Declaring existing religious bigotry and racial prejudice makes it obligatory for broad-minded people to endeavor to create good will and mutual understanding, the Rev. Dr. John Ray Ewers, pastor of the East End Christian Church, yesterday preached on "Why I Like the Catholics." Dr. Ewers said, in part:

"I like the Catholics because of the sturdy way in which they try to keep religion alive in an indifferent world. Because the great Catholic church has gone steadily forward in the calm faith in God, Christ and immortality, I like that church.

"I like the Catholics because they have sense enough to train their children in religion. Look at the way religious faith is inculcated in home and school. I must say I like the way in which Catholics attend church. In the first place, they do not have too many churches in one locality. We Protestants, with litle business sense, overlap and pile our churches in certain communities and neglect others.

"I like the manner in which Catholics support their church financially; how they care for their orphans, their aged and other dependents. I like the Catholic way of meeting all needs. Centuries of experience has taught this church to touch life religiously at all its great moments—birth, confirmation, marriage and death."

CHURCH MEET PLANS MADE

More than 250 parish delegates last night attended a meeting in Synod Hall, adjoining St. Paul's Cathedral, at which final plans for the Eucharistic Day ceremonies, to be held next Sunday night in Forbes Field, were made. From 60,000 to 80,000 laymen are expected to attend the ceremonies, which will be conducted by several hundred priests, assisted by 3,000 altar boys and choristers.

The meeting was in charge of the Rev. James M. Delaney, spiritual adviser to the diocesan Holy Name Society. The Rt. Rev. Hugh C. Boyle, bishop of the Pittsburgh diocese, who was to have addressed the delegates, was unable to attend.

Arrangements for transportation by railroads, bus lines and street cars were explained by Father Delaney, who said that more than 500 policemen will aid in handling the crowds. Many Protestants, including several ministers, have made known their intention of attending the ceremonies, he said.

The program will be opened with the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner," accompanied by the organ in Carnegie Music Hall, music of which will be relayed to Forbes Field by wires attached to loudspeakers.

A plenary indulgence to all men participating in the ceremonies has been granted by Pope Pius XI, Bishop Boyle informed priests in a letter Saturday.

Sleuth Says Woman Tried to Rob Him

The alleged attempt of Irene Taylor, 43, Negro of Linton street, to pick the pocket of Precinct Detective Harry Foster, in Penn avenue near Tenth street, Saturday night, landed her in Morals Court. At the hearing yesterday Foster testified the woman was just about to replace his money with a wad of paper when he arrested her. She was held for further investigation.

Youth Shot in Knee At Target Practice

Shot in the leg yesterday while at target practice on New Homestead Hill, Stanley Waschak, 17, of Forest avenue, West Homestead, was in Homestead Hospital today. Several other youths were shooting at a mark when the weapon used by Robert Stevens, police said, was discharged accidentally, the bullet striking Waschak.

Suspect Arrested As Skidmore Freed

Ernest Burkas, 26, of Wilmington, Del., was released from police custody in DuBois yesterday after police had convinced themselves he was not George Skidmore, wanted in Pittsburgh as a murder suspect. Burkas, arrested several days ago, was freed when local detectives wired a description of the fugitive.

Brush Fires Near Homestead Quelled

The Homeville Volunteer Fire Department was called twice yesterday to extinguish brush fires in the Calhoun and Ball plans, near Homestead. Both fires were prevented from reaching houses in the vicinity.

LIBRARY OPENS CAFETERIA

The Carnegie Library of the Oakland district has successfully initiated the cafeteria system of lending books. The new method which places the responsibility of charging the books with the individual borrower has caused some confusion, but the librarians feel that it will be entirely satisfactory as soon as the patrons fully understand the method.

The entire idea of the new "cafeteria system" has been devised for three reasons: to save time, increase accuracy and insure economy. If the number of assistant librarians can be reduced, the book fund will automatically increase and provide more books.

HERRON TO AID GIVE JOB DRIVE

Residents of Pittsburgh who have odd jobs that must be performed this fall, are urged by President of Council John S. Herron to take advantage of the Sun-Telegraph's "I Offer a Job" coupon. Herron said:

"Many men and women have work that should be done this fall. Other men and women want that work. The coupon offers an opportunity to bring the job-hunters and the employers together. Like all other officials of the city, I will be glad to co-operate in any way to make the plan a success."

The coupon, printed daily, is addressed to everyone who has a job to offer. The job may be large or small, temporary or permanent—cleaning cellars, removing awnings, beating carpts, raking lawns, fixing furnaces.

The city, within the limits imposed by financial obligations, is trying to find jobs for men out of work. Men who are working can find jobs for others in and about their own homes. If you have a job to offer, fill out the coupon, mail it to the Sun-Telegraph, and it will be turned over to the proper city bureau. A reputable citizen of Pittsburgh who needs work will be sent in answer to your call.

Mayor Charles H. Kline, who heartily indorses the plan, and T. F. Hansberry, secretary of the Civil Service Commission, will confer on a method of facilitating handling of the coupons by the city.

Commending the Sun-Telegraph's plan to aid the jobless as "highly laudable," H. M. Addison, managing director of Loew's Penn theater, today volunteered to aid by using notices on the screen and in the lobby of the theater, directing attention to the campaign.

LUCKY GIRL

worth had no enemies. Nothing in the house was touched, although jewelry and currency totaling several hundred dollars lay scattered on the dresser within easy reach of the miscreant.

"Mrs. Catherine Farnsworth, the widow, was in a nearby room when the fatal shot was fired. She heard the report, but thought it was a tire blowing out on the street, she told police early this morning. An hour later she went to her husband's room to investigate. Her cries awakened the servants who notified headquarters.

"A maid in the house, Marguerite Spinney, at first attempted to protect her mistress by stating that she and Mrs. Farnsworth heard the shot, and investigated together.

"Mrs. Farnsworth, however, stated that she alone heard the shot and found the body. She was joined by the maid later.

"Servants in the house heard no noise, and apparently the only one to hear the shot was Mrs. Farnsworth. She is being held in the city jail for further questioning. Chinese servants in Farnsworth's employ were dismissed after severe gruelling at the hands of Inspectors Horgan and Bidwell. The maid, Marguerite Spinney, will be held as a material witness.

Was Near Death
Farnsworth Believed to Have Ended Life

"The deceased leaves an estate that may be appraised at something approximate a million and a half. One-half of this, according to the terms of the will, goes to the widow. The other half to an only son, Chester T. Farnsworth. Bequests to several local charitable institutions amount to $20,000 or $30,000, to be deducted from the whole."

Later editions had headlines that put new light on the story.

"Alfred Farnsworth Suicide, Doctor Avers."

"Dr. Milton Bulloch, for many years the personal physician of the late Alfred A. Farnsworth, found dead with a bullet hole in his head at his residence, 2870 Presidio Terrace, early this morning, threw new light on the mystery this afternoon.

"In the coroner's offices shortly after 1 o'clock he stated that he had been treating Farnsworth for several days, and had warned him of his approaching end only a few hours before the shooting which culminated in his death.

"It is Dr. Bulloch's belief that Farnsworth took his own life in a fit of despondency. He was in very low spirits, and had expressed the wish, in Bulloch's office, that death would come soon.

"Mrs. Elizabeth Zader, a nurse in Dr. Bulloch's office, was a witness to Farnsworth's words. Upon being informed that the illness from which he was suffering was incurable and death not far distant, Farnsworth thought more of the effect of his approaching invalidism on his young wife, than of himself, both physician and nurse aver.

Hope Gone
Bullet Victim Worried About Wife

"'I could stand it if I were alone,' he is alleged to have said before leaving Bulloch's offices at 6:20 yesterday afternoon, 'but I cannot bear to think of chaining Mrs. Farnsworth to a hopeless invalid. She is young, and has had little pleasure in her life. This would be a great tragedy to her. She is of a very sympathetic nature, and it would mean that she would cut herself off from all normal pleasures and activities, to remain by my side.'

"Dr. Bulloch further states that Farnsworth spoke with bitterness of the barbarism of modern civilization which allows a person to live on in agony, after all hope of recovery is gone. 'It would be far kinder if you could give me something to end my suffering at once,' he is alleged to have said, 'rather than to allow me to become a nuisance to myself and a burden to those who love me.'

"Mrs. Farnsworth's attorneys, Allan and Gunther, are expected to make a motion for her release, following the doctor's testimony at the inquest tomorrow.

In Jail
Mother and Sister Visit Cathie

"Assistant District Attorney McLaughlin, however, does not believe that the doctor's statement will have much weight with the findings of the jury. Experts are agreed that it would have been physically impossible for Farnsworth to have fired the shot himself."

They told Cathie about it. She showed little interest. She sat on her narrow bed, with the gray blanket over it, and looked at all who came with wide, tearless eyes.

"I found him. He had a hole in his head. There was blood on the pillow," she said over and over.

When they told her that her mother and sister were waiting to see her she cried, "Oh, no, no!" and wept on the matron's starched white linen shoulder.

"They shouldn't have come!" she whispered. "Oh, why did ye tell them? I didn't want them to know. . . . Poor Ma . . . It will hurt her so!"

"But there's no keeping it quiet, my dear," Fanny Evans, the matron, told her. "It's in the papers, you know that."

"I know," Cathie said. She gave up then, and sobbed.

When she heard her mother's footstep in the corridor she started violently. She thought she couldn't bear it. But when Mary Paige's dear face appeared in the doorway and she saw her reach out her arms, lovingly, protectingly, she went into them with a little wailing cry:

"Mamma! Mamma!"

She hadn't called her mother that since she was a little girl.

Great Interest Here In Religious Forum

The religious forum with its battery of distinguished speakers has become a sell-out, it was announced today, only 200 standing room tickets will be available when the doors of the hall are opened. The affair, slated for tomorrow night, will bring Clarence Darrow and Quin O'Brien, of Chicago, to Carnegie Music Hall, where, with the Rev. Albert Edward Day and Rabbi Samuel H. JAMES H. REED RITES TODAY

Funeral services were to be held today for James H. Reed, Jr., 46, brother of Senator David A. Reed, who died Saturday in New York. The services were to be held from his late residence, 5024 Castleman street, with burial in Allegheny Cemetery.

Mr. Reed, president of the American Die and Forge Company of Swissvale, was visiting in New York when taken ill a week ago. Pneumonia caused his death, it was said.

Mr. Reed was a life-long resident of Pittsburgh. He was a member of the Shadyside Presbyterian Church. He was educated at Shady Side Academy and graduated from Princeton University in 1904. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Anica Humbird Reed; a son, James H. Reed, III; a daughter, Miss Frances P. Reed; his brother, Senator Reed; his mother, Mrs. Kate J. Aiken Reed, and a sister, Mrs. John G. Frazer, all of Pittsburgh.

PARISIAN TRIP STILL OPEN

There is still time for the girls of Pittsburgh and vicinity to take advantage of the offer to be the guest of Gloria Swanson on a de luxe tour to Paris or obtain a free trip to Bermuda in December. The Paris-Bermuda nomination blank will be found on page 28.

Girls, 18 years of age or older and unmarried, should read the rules in the blank and if they are eligible, according to the rules, they are invited to fill in the blank and send it to the Paris-Bermuda Tours Editor of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. By return mail they will get all the information about requirements.

The girl selected for the Paris trip will leave here early in December and will spend a day or two in New York visiting the motion picture studios. The party will sail on the French liner Paris. The return trip is to be made on the Ile de France shortly after New Years. Girls from 24 cities in the country will make the trip as guests of Miss Swanson.

In addition there will be five trips to Bermuda, given by the Sun-Telegraph. This trip will be made about the same time.

NUMBER PLAYER FLEECED

Police today were searching for a Gypsy woman who offered to tell the winning number in the clearing house lotteries for today, and failed to return after collecting $45 from Mrs. Effie Hancock, of 296 Kerns street.

The woman called at Mrs. Hancock's home Saturday afternoon and told her how the clearing house lotteries could be "beaten."

After receiving $45 as first payment, with the promise to divulge the number for today when she returned later, the woman left and so far no trace of her had been picked up.

The Camera Question Box

Today's question: Do you agree with Secretary of Labor Davis when he says: "The business fool in 1929 was he who had not fear; now the fool is he who has not hope?"

Miss Graham

MISS RUTH GRAHAM, Emsworth, unemployed: Yes, I agree with him, even though I am looking for work myself. I don't believe that anyone should lose hope, especially now, with conditions as they are.

MISS RUTH RIEDEL, Millvale: Secretary Davis, I believe, has the only solution to a future prosperity. It takes hope and anticipation to bring about any great change, so it must be with business. At a time like this, hope is essential in every line of work.

Miss Riedel

Mr. Galvin

BILL GALVIN, East End, unemployed: No, I do not agree with him. Perhaps you will say I am a pessimist, but I am just one of the many who have found out that hope has done him no good. It is easy to say, but not so easy to follow.

Mr. Kircher

GEORGE KIRCHER, South Side, unemployed: No, is my answer to this question. You, who do not know, will say I am a morbid person with no outlook on life. All I can say to you is—try living on hope and see how long it keeps you.

Mr. Broudy

DAVID BROUDY, orchestra leader: Yes, I agree with Secretary Davis in that statement. It is very evident that business conditions have altered considerably since 1929 and with them should the business man's outlook change. I am convinced that hope will be the savior of our present business depression.

Miss Geissinger

MISS RUTH GEISSINGER, Glenshaw, unemployed: I agree with Secretary Davis, because I believe that hope and courage uplift a man and help him to succeed. This applies to the whole nation as well.

Church Wedding

Saturday evening at 7:30 o'clock in St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church, Kittanning, Mildred Caroline Core, daughter of Mrs. Carl W. Core, of Lenape Lodge, Ford City, Pa., became the bride of Richard Ford, of Washington. There was a reception for the immediate families and friends in the Core home after the ceremony.

The church was lovely with ferns, bamboo and white chrysanthemums.

The bride walked down the aisle with her uncle, Capt. Daniel H. Core, and was given in marriage by her mother. Her gown was of ivory satin in princess mode, having long, close-fitting sleeves of lace, and she wore quaint mitts. Her veil of ivory net bordered with lace and held by a cap of lace, extended over the satin train of her gown, which was made in petal effect. She carried a mother-of-pearl prayer book, a maternal heirloom of many generations, from which showered a ribbon spray of lilies of the valley.

Bridal Party

The two maids of honor were Mary Catherine and Natalie Hammond Core, sisters of the bride, who wore similar gowns of psyche green taffeta made quaintly with basque waists, with peplums at the waist and bell bottom skirts. They wore white mitts and clusters of gardenias in cap effect. Mrs. James C. Hammond, wife of Lieut. James C. Hammond, of the United States Air Corps, Langley Field, Va., was the matron of honor, wearing emerald green taffeta. The bridesmaids, Dorothy Lynch, of Pittsburgh, and Tann Moesta, of Kittanning, Jane Core, of Ford City, and Sara E. Gibson, cousins of the bride, wore emerald green taffet gowns. Sara Gibson is the daughter of Judge Robert M. Gibson, of Pittsburgh. They all carried colonial bouquets of pompons tied with deep ruffles of tulle.

EYELET EMBROIDERY SEES A REVIVAL OF POPULARITY

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Oct. 6.—Once again the eyelet is viewing the mode both in the daytime and at night. It has been many seasons since English eyelet embroidery has made a popular place for itself in the mode. It was seen infrequently last spring and summer, but with the insistance of fashion for all things feminine, it was but a question of time before we had frocks of all-over "broderie anglaise" as it is known to dressmakers everywhere. Many suits have blouses of eyelet embroidery which seem to be much liked. And now we have evening frocks of this embroidery which is generally embroidered or beaded at the edges. Frocks thus embellished will no doubt be a logical choice for the winter resort wardrobe later on.

TUCKS are extremely popular for the smartest of day and evening frocks, for much smartness can be tucked into a tuck, as we all have discovered. Sheer and semi-sheer materials lend themselves well to much pleating and tucking and many dresses are made quite elaborate by clever use of these details. It lends a most graceful note to the frock.

TWO VERY smart frocks have been sketched for today. The first is a princess frock by Drescoll-Beer and features clever use of tucks and pleats. It is of apple green crepe marocain and has diagonal tucks which, on the skirt, terminate into pleats. Poised at the shoulder is a soft bow of the fabric. It has shaped decolletage both front and back.

* * *

THE OTHER FROCK, by Redfern, is of white chiffon and features large eyelets embroidered all over, and edged with shimmering beads of crystal. The softly falling circular lines of the cape and skirt are most graceful owing to the weight of the bead embroidery.

DR. TOPE WARNS STATE DRYS

An anti-dry victory in Pennsylvania in November will give the foes of prohibition an incalculable advantage in the next presidential election, the Rev. Dr. Homer W. Tope, superintendent of the Pennsylvania Anti-Saloon League, declared in an address in the First Reformed Presbyterian Church, Frankstown and Lang avenues, last night. He said in part:

"The clear-cut division in the Pennsylvania fight makes the election this year of more than usual significance in the next national election. If the dry cause should lose in Pennsylvania this year it would give incalculable aid and comfort to the enemy in the presidential campaign.

"We are not disturbed by reports in anti-dry newspapers. This calamity howl that prohibition is a failure is largely a misstatement, for in nearly every community in the United States the prohibition law is as well enforced as any other criminal laws."

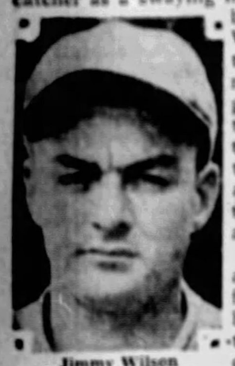
JIMMY WILSON SPURS ON CARDINALS

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 6.—The importance of a high grade catcher as a swaying influence in a ball game has never been better illustrated than in the present World Series. With all due respects to the improvement shown by the Cardinals in a mechanical sense, there is no getting away from the fact that the return of Jimmy Wilson to his post behind the bat has been the main item in putting the Redbirds back in the running after the loss of the first two games threatened the National League with another rout.



Jimmy Wilson

Wilson's superb catching has made all the difference in the world in the form of the Heydler champions. They have looked like a new ball club since the clever maskman recovered sufficiently from an injury to his right ankle to get back on the job. Gus Mancuso caught fine ball and gave a splendid account of himself in the two games in which he worked, but there is no detail of back-stopping work in which he can be compared with the masterful Wilson.

THE CARDS BEGAN to look like a different team the minute Wilson donned the windpad for the third game. He took command of the situation immediately, put every player on his toes by his own gingery example, snapped the ball around the bases in a manner to make the Philadelphia runners hug the sacks, and in addition to his own value as a hitter and base runner, has had much to do with bringing about the more effective pitching and smarter, more aggressive play on the part of the Redbirds.

Nobody realizes more fully than the other St. Louis players themselves the weighty role that Wilson played in turning the tide after the first two games had gone to the enemy. They are rating him as the greatest catcher in baseball, refuse to give even Mickey Cochrane an equal ranking with him. "Wilson is in a class of his own," declared Burleigh Grimes in singing the praises of the Cardinal receiver. "Cochrane is a great catcher, there is no denying that, but I'll take Wilson for mine every time. He is not only Cochrane's equal in hitting, speed, throwing and other mechanical detail, but finesses the opposing batters and base-runners to an extent of which I do not think Cochrane is capable."

ONE PLAYER IN the big stakes who is living up to his reputation is Al Simmons, star left fielder and swatsmith of the Athletics. It would be hard to single out a better player in present-day baseball than the big fellow from Milwaukee.

Al Simmons

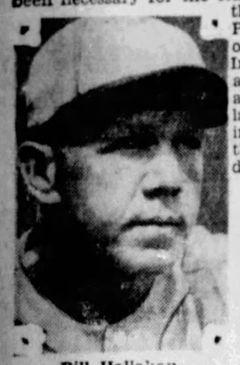
Simmons has been shining as a hitter in particular. The St. Louis hurlers have been pitching to him just about every possible way, but no matter what they serve up, it appears that they can't stop the Mackian slugger from socking it. He looks to be a born hitter in every respect.

IN LAST YEAR'S post-season series Simmons batted only an even .300, with six hits in 20 times at bat, but judging from the clip at which he has been leaning against the agate in the present struggle, he is going to make that record look like a pitcher's batting average in comparison. It will not be surprising if he winds up with one of the highest marks ever made in a World Series. He is unlikely to reach the record, however, which is an average of .625, made by Babe Ruth in the series of 1928 with 10 hits in 16 legal trips to the plate. The Bambino's clouts included three homers and three doubles for a total of 22 bases, which is another World Series record, equalled only by Joe Harris for the Senators against the Pirates in seven games in 1925.

THIS YEAR MARKED only the third time in World Series history that a club defeated in the first two games came back and tied the count in four contests by winning the next two engagements. On all threee occasions it was a National League club that did it, the Giants having been the outfit to accomplish it in both previous instances.

In 1917 the McGrawites were beat in the first two bouts by the White Sox, but pulled up to even counts by winning the third and fourth. In 1921 the Giants not only were defeated twice right off the reel, but were shut out both times, yet they turned around and won the next two battles. They got an even break in the two series, losing to the White Sox in six games, but winning out against the Yankees in eight contests.

IT WILL BE the only World Series in four years in which it has been necessary for the clubs to make two jumps by shifting back to the scene of the opening game. In 1927 the Pirates opened at home and the second set of games in New York settled the argument. In 1928 the Cards were squelched in the third and fourth games on their own grounds after losing the first two in New York, and last year, after dropping the first two games in Chicago, the Cubs were counted out in the second part of the schedule in Philadelphia.



Bill Hallahan

IN COMPARISON OF left-hand pitchers in the series, Bill Hallahan stands out to date. Even if he loses his second game he will have as good a record as Bob Grove made in his first two starts, and at that Grove was admittedly helped by a flock of horse-shoes in the one game that he placed on the right side of the books for the A's, whereas Hallahan's victory was a masterpiece and the only shutout pitched in a World Series game since October 5, 1926, when Jess Haines, exactly four years before, who held the A's to one run in the fourth game of 1930, blanked the Yankees. In spite of his smoke-ball reputation, Cardinal batters, after facing Grove in two games, assert that the Philadelphia star has not shown them as much speed as Hallahan possesses, that his fast ball lacks Hallahan's jump and that his curve is not nearly as wide or as sharp as that of the St. Louis southpaw.

AS FOR WALBERG, the National League players declare he is not to be compared with either Hallahan or Grove in ability, and the Rube's showing in Saturday's game appears to bear them out. In addition, the Cardinals are questioning Walberg's nerve and steadiness.

In support of this they charge that Connie Mack does not dare to notify Walberg very far in advance as to when he is going to pitch. That was noticeably true of Saturday's game. To keep the Rube from worrying over a possible pitching assignment, Mack sent him to the outfield during the batting practice of the A's, let Rommel take a turn at bat in the hitting drill, and then warmed up both Walberg and Rommel, not telling Walberg until game time that he was to do the pitching.

EVER SINCE HE broke into the big show last year, the brilliant

FAVORITES COP IN EARLY BATTLES

By JESS CARVER.

Developments in the college football sphere over the weekend as major elevens marched onward through good, bad and indifferent opposition, indicated very strongly that once again Pittsburgh may boast two of the crackerjack elevens of the land, certainly of the East, and that when the twain shall meet, fur shall fly. Pitt and Tech please take their bows.

Throughout the country, with one or two exceptions, favorites finished out in front. On the West coast, Ed Hollinberry's Washington Staters stepped into the picture in no uncertain stride by knocking off the highly touted California Bears. Southern Methodists, with a sophomore team treated Notre Dame to a ball game, losing to Rockne's charges in the closing moment of the game. Harry Kipke's Michigan State team battled Michigan to a scoreless tie. Ohio State won decisively over Indiana; Vanderbilt trounced Minnesota; Illinois nosed out Iowa State; Wisconsin trimmed Carleton, and Purdue and Northwestern took Baylor and Tulane, respectively, into camp fairly easily.

PITT STRONG

In the East, West Virginia was toppled into the discard, sharing with Duquesne the doubtful honor of being about the only major elevens in the section to be defeated. Penn State, Bucknell and Wash-Jeff kept going. New York University crushed Wesleyan Harvard, Yale and Princeton won with points to spare. The Navy took William and Mary and the Army walloped Furman. EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF SATURDAY: JIM PREAS KICKED 18 GOALS AFTER TOUCHDOWNS—The Georgia Tech-Cumberland game of 1916, in which Georgia was the victor by the remarkable score of 222-0, is one which stands out in the annals of football. During the first half of that game Preas kicked 18 goals after touchdowns.

TOMORROW—THE BOSS CLAM EATER.

TODAY'S CLASH MAY SWAY SERIES

By JAMES J. LONG,
Staff Correspondent.

SPORTSMEN'S PARK, ST. LOUIS, Oct. 6.—From a series of best four out of seven games, the tussle for the world's baseball championship had narrowed down to a test of best two out of three as the Cardinals and Athletics made ready to grapple for the fifth time here this afternoon.

With the count deadlocked at two victories for each side, two more decisions for one club or the other were required to decide the big fight, which started out like another sweep for the American League, but which the courageous comeback of the Red Birds turned into the most closely contested World Series of recent years.

The outcome of the whole struggle appeared to depend largely upon the outcome of today's game, as the winner would need only one additional victory, with two chances to get it, while it would be necessary for this afternoon's loser to win two in succession in order to pull the championship out of the fire.

GRIMES TO HURL

The important fifth tilt was to be a battle of right hand pitchers, with Burleigh Grimes, former spitball ace of the Pirates, on the hill for the Cards against George Earnshaw for the Mackmen. It was the first game of the series in which the fans found it possible to guess the pitchers with any degree of certainty. Earnshaw was the only qualified starting hurler available for Mack, who appear to have but two top-grade flingers at his command at best, while the fact that Bill Hallahan and Jess Haines had been in the last two games made Grimes the logical choice for St. Louis.

There was just one possibility that Manager Gabby Street might make a change in his pitching plans at the last minute. That hinged on the chance that it might rain. The skies were cloudy at noon and showers appeared not improbable.

Street admitted that in event of rain he would hold Grimes back for the sixth game and send another chucker to the mound today, as a spitballer cannot operate successfully in damp weather. Grimes himself was hopeful that nothing would arise to force a change in the pitching arrangements. When he arrived at the park he said that he had never in his life been more eager to pitch a ball game. He felt that he had a break or two coming to him after being outlucked in the opening duel with Grove last Wednesday and predicted that he would turn the tables in his second clash with the White Elephants.

CARDS CONFIDENT

Grimes' confidence was shared by all of his mates. The A's had scored only one run against the Cardinal pitchers in the last 22 innings, and Street's men figured that they had them stopped and would go right through to two more wins and capture the series.

The A's were equally confident of winning the next two. They thought they were due after losing twice in succession and could see nothing ahead but two victories for Earnshaw and Grove.

The clubs will go back to Philadelphia after today's game to resume the series there on Wednesday. No game will be played tomorrow, as the players will be en route to the home of the A's.

INTEREST AT FEVER HEAT

The success of the Cards in tying up the series had put baseball interest in St. Louis at fever heat,

PLAYERS' POOL REDUCED

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—The 1930 World Series players' pool derived from a major portion of the gate receipts for the first four games only amounts to $323,875.50. It is the smallest in eight years and nearly $100,000 short of the high mark of $419,736.60, set in 1928, for the series between the Yankees and Cardinals.

Of the total amount of the pool, 70 per cent, or $226,712.85, goes to the contending Athletics and and Cardinals, on a basis of 60 per cent to the winner and 40 per cent to the loser.

Figured on a basis of a split on 27 shares by each team, the winners' money, $136,027.69, will mean $5,038 for each player on the victorious side. The losers' end of the purse, $90,685.14, divided on the same basis, will mean $3,358 per full share.

The A's and Cards, therefore, in addition to the honor attached, will battle it out for the difference of approximately $1,700 per man.

The remaining 30 per cent of the total pool, or $97,159.65, will be spread among the second, third and fourth place clubs of each league.

The "split" for the other clubs figures as follows: $24,290.65 each for the Chicago Cubs and Washington Senators, the second place teams; $16,193.80 each for the New York Giants and Yankees, third place outfits, and $8,096.90 each for the Brooklyn Robins and Cleveland Indians.

Dedending on how it is divided, but estimating on the same basis as the series contenders, each player on the second place clubs will receive nearly $1,000, with about $600 for each player on a third place club, and around $300 for each fourth place performer.

World Series Tied Like Lovers' Knot—Altrock

By NICK ALTROCK,
Famous Baseball Humorist.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 6.—As an American League employe, I am not feeling so good today. Just when I figured those St. Louis Redbirds were just dead enough to send out to the taxidermist, they up and nibble at a shot of cocaine and before you can say Jack or Wilbert Robinson, they have the World Series tied up in a lovers' knot.

I don't mind eating all the words I said about the Cards last week, because my digestion is very good, but I hate to have my reputation as an expert tarnished. Here I have been picking the American League team to win every time they had a World Series, and it has put my guessing average away up in the millions. I still think the A's will come through, but I have got to do a lot of pulling and hauling to make this nightmare come true.

Nick Altrock

Your Old Uncle Nick's predictions while he is staying in St. Louis are bound to be infallible because I am stopping at the Hotel Statler, where the guest is always right. I have no difficulty in predicting accurately as long as I stay in my room.

Yesterday's contest was a beauty and you didn't hear those Philadelphia bats doing anything to break up the Sabbath calm. Connie's boys were just as nice and gentlemanly at the bat as if they were in Sunday School.

And Burleigh Grimes has yet to go in with that spitter sizzling in great shape. As a matter of fact, there was nothing the matter with Burleigh's saliva delivery the first time he faced the A's, except they seemed to hit the horsehide on the snout when they needed a run or two.

The Cards looked good yesterday behind Jess Haines and St. Louis fans don't regard them as orphans any more. Before the end of the week the local inhabitants will be as cuckoo as squirrels if the Cards keep up this winning streak. You know, the wildest town in the solar system was St. Louis the time the Cards won the championship in 1926. When the team came home with the flag tucked away, bankers threw rolls of ticker tape around, stenographers chucked typewriter ribbons at each other and garage men were tossing monkey wrenches in the air. I don't know what the piano dealers did, but they were in on the celebration, too.

IT WAS PADLOCKED

The result was, when the Cards came home they could have had anything they wanted in St. Louis, although the only thing that anyone would want in St. Louis was padlocked 10 years ago. But St. Louis is a rabid baseball town when things are going right. In other cities the ball park has wire screens to protect the fans. In St. Louis, it is to protect the visiting players. Well, they play one more game here and then we plug back to Philadelphia. I would not say Connie Mack has his back to the

MACK STILL CONFIDENT

By CONNIE MACK,
Manager, World Champion Athletics.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 6.—The Cardinals have now done what the Athletics already have done.

They won two games in St. Louis after the Athletics took two games in Philadelphia and today finds the two teams even—and we will be starting all over again.

Robert Moses Grove pitched better ball yesterday than he did when he beat Grimes on opening day, and it was a shame that such matchless pitching had to be ruined by the delinquency of our players who erred in a crisis to give the Cardinals two unearned runs and victory.

This tragedy was set in the fourth inning. After Frisch and Bottomley were retired, Hafey came through with a two-base hit against the screen in right.

Blades hit a high-bounding ball to Dykes, which should have been an easy third out, instead of turning and touching Hafey, who was within a few feet of him and could easily have been tagged at the time. Dykes made the mistake of throwing to first. He quickly realized it after the ball left his hand for the throw was a bit wide and eluded Foxx, who batted it down in front of him.

Hafey kept on for the plate and Foxx had a good chance to retire him by making one of his usual swift throws to Cochrane, but he did not put his power in the heave and, moreover, it was low and Cochrane had no chance to retire Hafey, who scored.

LAUDS HAINES

Two hits followed, one a scratch of Gelbert's that Grove broke down, but couldn't field, and the second run scored. These two

IMMEDIATELY AFTER GAME

CARDS BEST FIGHTERS IN GAME, STREET SAYS

PILOT CERTAIN OF VICTORY IN SERIES

By GABBY STREET,
Manager St. Louis Cardinals.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 6.—After the way we have come from behind to tie the Athletics in the 1930 World Series, I don't think anyone ever will again doubt the gameness of my club. I always have contended that it was the greatest fighting team in baseball—one able to overcome all sorts of obstacles and I think the players have shown themselves to be such in taking two straight from the American League champions and evening up the series at two games each.

Gabby Street

I admit some of my boys did not feel any too well after taking two on the chin in Philadelphia. But that is all changed now. They have come from behind and now it is the Athletics who are not such a cocky aggregation. We have shown them that we can play winning baseball. Not only that, but we are going to continue to do it. Even after two straight defeats, I said we were going back to Philadelphia, and events have shown that I was a good prophet.

GREATEST OF SEASON

In giving us our second straight victory, Jess Haines pitched one of his greatest games of the season. He was wild, but it was because he was putting too much "stuff" on his pitches. Of course, I had a man warming up in the bull pen several times, but even in the early innings, when he was going at his worst I never had any idea of taking him out of the box. He became better as the game progressed and he showed that even a right-hand pitcher can stop such sluggers as Simmons, Cochran and Foxx. I knew that Haines could do it and he certainly rewarded me with one of the finest exhibitions I have seen in a long time.

The turning point of the game came in the fourth inning, when with the score tied I chased Hafey home when Dykes made a wild throw on Blades' grounder. Chick of course scored, that run put us ahead and we were never headed after that. That was what I was there for though. I think that play upset the Athletics considerable, as after that they did not look as dangerous to me as they did in the early innings, while passing around the bouquets for my players, don't overlook Charley Gelbert, he has done everything that could be expected of a player. There never were two prettier stops than those he made against Miller in the first inning and Simmons in the seventh.

SAVES JESS HAINES

Had he missed either one, it would probably have caused Haines a lot of trouble. Not only did he shine on the defense, but also on the offense, inasmuch as he scored the tying run for us and then drove in the tally that put us two to the good. This young man is certainly a great player and a money player to boot.

Everybody asks me why Jim Bottomley has not been hitting. That I cannot answer. But this much I can say, Jim has been hitting at nothing but good balls and he has driven out some hard smashes, but they have not gone safe. But he has done all that could be expected in the field and he is hustling all the way, just like my entire ball club.

The two games here showed what hustling would do. In the fifth game today, it will be Burleigh Grimes for us. He had tough luck in the game he pitched at Shibe Park, when all the hits were for extra bases. But here we have shown that long hits are not as easy to get and I am sure that Grimes will send us on our way to Philadelphia tonight with a lead of one game. Then we will keep right on hustling until we win the series and bring the title back to the National League.

Haines Is Victor

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Staff Correspondent.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 6.—On the humble brow of Ol' Jess Haines, sterling righthander, rests the deserved laurel signifying the hero of the fourth battle of the series. Jess waited until he was out beyond 37 to turn in what many will say is the greatest game of his honorable career, and this, while considering that four years ago to the day he measured the Yankees for a shutout defeat in a similar set of games.

Haines yesterday was called upon to face the pitcher who is generally credited with being the greatest sharpshooter in the game—the willowy Lefty Grove. And Grove need not feel badly over his part of the drama, for the fastball star was almost as clever as his older rival.

A brief bit of unsteadiness at the start on the part of Haines led many of his admorers to think he was not right for the day. Two infield hits and a clean single by Al Simmons, the latter with two out, gave the A's a quick run. In the next round, Ol' Jess began to step out—when Joe Boley came up in the ninth with two out and none on, Haines was still struttin' his stuff. He made Boley hoist a fly to Ray Blades and the battle was over with the Redbirds on the shouting end, the score being 3 to 1.

ONE OUTFIELD HIT

And in that sustained period from the first round to the finish, Farmer Jess allowed one scratch hit; so it will be seen that the enemy made only one outfield hit off the veteran throughout the game.

Grove saw the battle tied in the third on Charley Gelbert's triple and a single by Haines, the pitcher hitting a spunky drive to center to complete the run.

The Cardinals won the great fight in the fourth after two were out on Hafey's double, Dykes' low throw of Blades' grounder, which gave Hafey a chance to score the winning tally through the medium of a fine burst of speed; Wilson's hit-and-run single sending Blades to third, and Gelbert's infield hit. From that point to the finish, Grove did not allow a hit.

Gelbert's fielding was a distinctive feature of the game. The clever shortstop was the starting point of a couple of whirlwind plays that made the fans dizzy.

TO FLY TO SERIES

Joe Dawson, former Pirate pitcher, now a leading local aviator, plans to hop off Wednesday morning for Philadelphia to witness the sixth game of the world series. He will have room for three passengers and may be communicated with by calling Rodgers Field.

MOTOR SQUARE RING OPENER TONIGHT

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

Tony Herrera vs. Joe Glick, 10 rounds.
Harry Harris vs. Chuck Taggart, 8 rounds, and Al Becker vs. Tom McCaffrey, solid six rounds.
Bobby Barnes vs. Marty Gornick, 6 rounds each, Mister Rogers Garden.
Babe Hall vs. Jack Russell, 10 rounds, Arena, Philadelphia.
Midget Mike O'Dowd vs. Marty Fields, 10 rounds, Chicago.
Eddie Dempsey vs. Kid Affholter and Francis Maclaine vs. Freddie Dias, 6 rounds each, New York.

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

The stage is set for the reopening of Motor Square Garden, in the East End, for boxing tonight.

Joe Glick, Brooklyn lightweight veteran, who has met virtually all of the stars in the featherweight, junior-lightweight and lightweight classes during his nine years in the ring, makes his local debut against Tony Herrera, Mexican favorite, of Chicago, in the 10-round main bout. Both men arrived in town yesterday in shape for the fray.

A strong preliminary card rounds out the program. It brings together Harry Harris, of Bellaire, O., "Gene Tunney's double," and Chuck Taggart, hard-hitting young heavyweight, of Butler, Pa., in the eight-round semi-final, and finds Al Becker, Sheraden's larruping middleweight, against Tom McCaffrey, of Youngstown, O., and Bobby Barnes, Homewood Negro, against Marty Gornick, of McKeesport, in the preliminaries.

The first bout is set for 8:30.

Between Rounds

Len Johnson, Bunny Buntarb's crude Swede heavyweight, boxes Frank Novak of the North side, in one of the bouts on next week's card at Motor Square Garden.

Semi-monthly amateur boxing shows are planned at the Pittsburgh Lyceum this winter on the first and third Thursdays. A class of approximately 24 boxers has been organized for the season, with Frank Grate, Danny Ryan and Terry McManus acting as coaches.

A Joe Sekyra-George Panka bout is in the making for Motor Square Garden.

Ernie Caesar and Sherman Brown will box at the Broadway club in Philadelphia Thursday night. Pinky Walker and Lou Hardcastle meet at Egg Harbor, N. J., the same night.

Promoter Appies Meyers of the Moose Temple expects to complete his card today for his third show of the indoor season, scheduled next Friday night. He has Larry Madge and Jimmy Belmont in the main bout and Johnny Smackey and Jimmy Reed in another 10-rounder, making up a double windup billing.

Promoter Jim McGirr will put on another double windup show at McKeesport next Thursday night, giving two Clairton lads a chance to move up to feature bout estate. One of them, Eddie Heiser, meets Eddie Branson, Negro lightweight, of the Hill, in the feature event, and the other, Johnny Warenr, featherweight, takes on Dan Bullick, of Duquesne, in the other 10-rounder. In the two six-round bouts, opponents will be secured for Marty Gornick, McKeesport lightweight, and Joe Bozone, McKeesport featherweight, just escaping from the amateurs. Prices for the show will be cut to 50 cents in the balcony and $1.50 on the main floor.

PITT, CARNEGIE TEAMS STRONG

burg sprang somewhat of a surprise by beating Villanova. Fordham served Buffalo almost as bad a licking as did Tech and Colgate missed the century mark by one point against Bethany.

If you have been preparing to shed tears for Pitt, you'd better save 'em for a more deserving cause. The Panthers may not be the best team in the land, but it will pretty near take the best to beat them. The line pushed West Virginia all over the field at Morgantown Saturday afternoon, and there is little doubt but that the score could have been much larger had Coach Sutherland so desired. West Virginia never threatened to score; its running attack was almost completely smothered by the Pitt defense and three of the four passes completed were thrown against the third string eleven.

Warren Heller, filling Uansa's shoes at left halfback, gave further evidence of real ability. He has a lot of drive, and when he learns to work better with his interference, and when the Pitt attack is smoothed a bit, he's going to be a dangerous threat.

Franklyn Hood, playing with a broken thumb and his right hand in a cast, handled the fullback job very smartly. A step or two more of speed and Hood would have been away for at least two touchdowns in the first period. His defensive work left little to be desired.

Hart Morris, Ernie Lewis, Mike Milligan and Francis Seigel are a neat quartet of guards, there being little to choose between the four of them. All went well against the Mountaineers. It was feared that the loss of Ray Montgomery and Luby DiMeolo would be too severe a blow for Pitt to overcome, but I think the combinations that can be had from the four mentioned will handle the job very satisfactorily.

TECH HAS THE STUFF

The tackles and ends need little discussion. It is enough to say that few quarterbacks will run plays at the MacMurdo-Quatse side of the line. . . at least, not often.

Tech has the goods, without a doubt. The Tartans started off very impressively against Buffalo, but in beating the tough Thiel eleven Saturday, by a 52-6 score, they really gave a more impressive indication of strength than they did against the Bulls.

GEORGIA TECH NEXT

The two toughest games on the Tech card are those with Pitt and Notre Dame. Temple can't be so hot, as it only beat Thiel, 13-7. Wash-Jeff and New York University will not be exactly in the set-up class. This week's game with Georgia Tech will be the first test for the locals, but I'm afraid it's going to be worse than a test for Georgia.

Other district games came out as they were expected to, with the favorites on top. Wash-Jeff ran rough shod over Westminster. Allegheny showed unexpected power in beating the Edinboro Teachers. Grove City finally landed on St. Francis and Mt. St. Marys sank St. Vincent. Waynesburg was idle.

Sport Vignettes

Hallahan and Haines—this is getting to be an "h" of a series for the "A's" . . . And the Athletics are beginning to learn that even their best pitchers can't win without runs behind him . . . Don't tell anyone we told you, but it's a good bet Cholly Hyatt, former Pitt basketball star, will do his pastiming with the Cleveland Rosenblums in the American League next season, which gets under way late next month . . . And that Duquesne University is angling for a football game between its Buff Donnelli-coached freshmen and the Notre Dame freshmen on a date now open . . . The Duke yearlings recently attracted notice by beating Bellefonte Academy, a trick not being turned every day.

In Philadelphia now they have forgotten about Gabby Street and concentrate on talking about Gabby Grimes . . . Speaking of gabby subjects, Gaby Bagdad, the fighter, really is Gabriel Bagdassarian . . . Battling Levinsky, the old heavyweight fighter, and former light-heavyweight champion, is about to open a business men's gym in New York . . . And Jim Farley, chairman of the New York Athletic Commission, is to resign shortly, now that he has been named chairman of the State Democratic Committee . . . Mike Hamas, former Penn State star, is heavyweighting in California.

Bill Roper, who will quit as head coach at Princeton after this season, to be succeeded by his chief assistant, Al Wittmer, Jr., former local star at Allegheny High School, is in his seventeenth year as mentor of the Nassau Tigers. He served from 1906 to 1911, inclusive, and then came back in 1919 and has been on the job ever since . . . His record, including last Saturday's opening game triumph over Amherst, is 89 victories, 23 defeats and 15 ties . . . His elevens have scored 2,060 points against 579 by opponents . . . Roper rates his 1925 team as the greatest he ever coached, although it was not among his four undefeated elevens . . . That aggregation was tied by Navy and beaten by Colgate, only to come back and defeat Harvard, 35-0, and Yale, 25-12, to win the championship of the Big Three.

Motor Square Garden has closed for a Buck McTiernan-Bucky Lawless bout, October 20, and likely will go through with its Tom Heeney-Emmett Rocco affair next Monday night.—HARRY KECK.

BURNS BEATEN BY TUBE CITY ELEVEN

By TOM BIRKS.

Ianuiot football flashed some fine games yesterday afternoon, the three tilts in the Western Pennsylvania Independent Gridiron Conference attracting capacity crowds. The McKeesport Olympics defeated the Burns Club, of New Kensington, 6-0, with 11,000 fans watching the battle. The Ambridge Mystics made their debut in the loop by losing to West View, 8 to 0, at the Fair Oaks stadium, and the Majestics defeated East Pittsburgh, 27-0, at Sullivan Field.

The Majestics will play their remaining home games at the Bridgeville Speedway. They play the Prospect team in a night game at Johnstown, Wednesday, and West View at West View next Sunday.

A number of other important games also were played yesterday, among them the Monessen Olympics' win over Seneca, 20-0; the Glendale Tigers' victory over Homewood Jenkins, 6-0, and Beltzhoover's 2-0 triumph over Brentwood. The J. J. Veronas beat Twenty-seventh Ward, 21-0; Millvale Amici and Pleasant Valley played a scoreless tie; Millvale Cards beat Phoenix, 7-0; Valley Strip nosed out B. F. Imperial, 7-6, and Rox Rangers swamped Manchester, 32-0.

OLYMPIC LINE STRONG

A powerful Olympic line was the main cause of the Burns defeat. Only once did Burns threaten. The Olympic line stopped Uansa and Parkinson on the five-yard line with the score 6-0 in the home team's favor. In the last three minutes of play in the first half the entrance of Zoltac put punch into the Tube City team's attack. The ball was marched on downs from the Burns 35-yard line. Zoltac took it over with only one minute to go. The extra point kick was blocked.

Zoltac, Kaletz, Klinzing, and Minnick starred, while Chile, Sharkey, Pendro and Heinzer looked good for Burns. The Olympics had the edge in first downs, 10 to six.

The opening score at Ambridge came when West View blocked a kick, and it went back of the goal line for a safety. The touchdown came in the final quarter. Mahler bucked the ball over from the 4-yard mark after the Ambridge safety man fumbled a punt.

HARRIS IS STAR

Ollie Harris, former Geneva fullback, played halfback for Ambridge and exhibited a neat game. Zaneski, Bus Shelton and Little looked great while Stan Berkman and Mahler starred in the West View backfield. Hamer at end played fine defensive football for Muzzio. Kelly was the outstanding player on the West Park line.

Sleepy Glenn, former West Virginia star, was the power in the Majestic victory over East Pittsburgh. He scored two touchdowns. Harp Vaughan also carried the ball over twice.

GELBERT HERO OF SERIES, RUTH SAYS

CARDINAL ACE SPARK PLUG OF TEAM

By BABE RUTH,
Baseball's Highest Salaried Player.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 6.—I appreciate the fine work of Jess Haines yesterday and Bill Hallahan the day before. They pitcher wonderful ball. But to my mind the real hero of this World Series so far has been Charley Gelbert, the Cardinal shortstop. There was a young fellow, playing his first real season of big league baseball, tossed into the toughest spot in the world. And how he has played.

Babe Ruth

In all the World Series I've seen and played in—and there have been a lot of them—I don't think I have ever seen a shortstop do his job as thoroughly and as well as young Gelbert. He can hit, he can field, he can throw and he can run. Yesterday's game, like the one the day before, was devoid of any real excitement or any real breaks. Of couse, I suppose a lot of folks will say that Jimmy Dykes' error that let in two runs and lost the game for Bob Grove, was a break. But the way I size things up I don't think errors or base hits are ever to be called breaks. A break to my mind is a play over which players have no influence—a stone on the infield that makes a ball take a bad hop—or something like that. And this series has been very free of breaks of that sort.

DESERVED TO WIN

The Cardinals played the better ball yesterday and they deserved to win. It was a tough game for Bob Grove to lose. He pitched well from start to finish and the fact that two unearned runs were scored cannot be held against Bob. Just the same, however, Jess Haines outpitched him. I wrote Sunday that to my mind Jess Haines would be as tough a pitcher as the A's were called upon to meet. And he was.

I played against Jess myself, you know, and I know from experience just how tough that knuckle ball and that slow stuff can be. I'll never forget the time Jess shut us out in the 1926 series, and I know just how Cochrane and Simmons and the rest of the gang felt when they'd swing from the heels at what looked like a perfect pitch only to have a little pop fly go sailing into a waiting fielder's hand. Against any team of sluggers slow stuff, particularly if the pitcher has control, is most effective—and Jess Haines showed it yesterday.

Naturally the loss of yesterday's game puts the A's right back where they started and gives the Cardinals the chance they've been praying for, both Cards and A's are well set for pitchers tomorrow. Earnshaw and Grimes both are in shape to work and that game is a toss up. For the following game, however, I believe Gabby Street has the edge. He might come back again with Hallahan since the left-hander would have three days of rest—and, of course, he has Sylvester Johnson waiting and ready to go.

Connie has only Earnshaw and Grove—and if George pitches the next game and loses, then Connie will have to shoot Grove back for that first game in Philadelphia.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—(INS.)—Struck with a pitched ball in yesterday's city series game between the Chicago Cubs and White Sox, Johnny Watwood, first baseman and centerfielder for the Sox, was in a hospital today suffering from a skull fracture.

A fast ball, pitched by Pat Malone, Cub pitcher, struck Watwood on the head just above the right ear. Although he was knocked unconscious, Watwood's injury at first was not considered serious.

The National League entrant again went one up on the White Sox yesterday when Malone outlasted five White Sox pitchers for a 6-to-4 victory. Ted Lyons, who stopped the Cubs cold in the first game of the set, was not the pitcher to fool them yesterday, and he was batted from the box in the fifth inning.

The Sunday game drew the biggest crowd of the series, 45,104, paid admissions. The score:

wall, but something is pressing between his shoulders and I don't mean his suspenders. When this St. Louis club begins to hit, it makes a fellows' pitching aces look like deuces.

Anyway, today's game should tell up which alley the wind is blowing. Of course, the first four games are the hardest for the magnates because they have to split with the players, but today's fifth game isn't doing Connie Mack's or Gabby Street's digestion any good, either.

MY 50 YEARS IN BASEBALL

by CONNIE MACK
MANAGER OF WORLD CHAMPION PHILADELPHIA ATHLETICS

INSTALLMENT NO. 25.

After their rather disappointing showing of the previous year, the Athletics came back in 1905 and won their second American League pennant.

The team that season was composed of Harry Davis, first base; Dan Murphy, second base; Monte Cross, shortstop; Lave Cross, third base; Jack Knight, utility infielder; Hartsel, Lord, Seybold, Hoffman and Barton, outfielders, although the last named also could catch; Schreck and Powers, catchers, and Plank, Bender, Waddell, Henley, Coakley and Dygert, pitchers.

Connie Mack

The Athletics won the pennant with an average of .621. It was a close fight nearly all of the way and victory was virtually gained in a series in Boston early in September, when the Athletics took three out of four games from the Red Sox.

It so happened that, on the last day of this series, the bell had tolled, according to the legend, for wearing straw hats. As the Athletics players were charged with enthusiasm over their triumphs in Boston, they decided to smash all straw hats when they assembled at the Back Bay Station in Boston to take a night train for Philadelphia.

PLAYERS CELEBRATE

The players filed into the station in twos and threes, and, as each group approached, their straw hats were broken. The victims then would line up with the others and help smash the skimmers of the newcomers until there wasn't a straw lid left on the team.

Andy Coakley, who had pitched and won on the previous day, lived in Providence, R. I., and I granted him permission to spend the last day of the Boston series with his family, with the understanding that he would board our train when it reached Providence, which is only a short run from Boston.

Coakley, of course, was not in on the hat-smashing ritual at the Back Bay station and Rube Waddell, who had taken an active part in the lid-wrecking ceremony, appointed himself a committee of one to greet Coakley when the train stopped at Providence.

When Waddell approached Andy at the Providence station, the pitcher, seeing a lot of snickering ball players waiting for the fun, immediately became suspicious and then divined what was in the left-hander's mind. So he placed his straw under his coat and walked past the Rube and went aboard. The pitcher and the other players followed.

PRANK IS COSTLY

In those days, each player carried his own uniform roll, which was equipped with a pocket where his spiked shoes could be kept.

As the Rube made a dash for Andy, the latter threw his bag at Waddell and it happened that the spikes in his shoes gashed the Rube's chin.

It was all skylarking, but the Rube was a trifle nettled and rushed Coakley again, but tripped over the uniform bag and landed heavily against the corner of a seat with his left shoulder.

I thought the boys had enough of it and told them to stop. Peace was restored and the incident quickly was dismissed as the players formed card games.

It was a hot night and the Rube discarded his tie and collar, rolled up his shirt sleeves and sat next to an open window. The next morning, when we reached the North Philadelphia station, the Rube came up and told me he could not raiseh is left arm. It was as stiff as a pine board.

WADDELL LOST FOR SERIES

This genuinely alarmed me, for the Rube always had boasted that he never had a sore arm in his life and always was quick to twit any pitcher who complained on that score.

I firmly believe that the Rube contracted his ailment more from exposing his arm to an open window than from the fall against the car seat.

The trainer worked on Rube's arm indefatigibly, and while he attempted to pitch a few times after the accident, he found it impossible to do so.

The accident was a stunning blow to me, for I had counted on Waddell heavily in the World Series with the Giants. Our information was to the effect that the Giants did not like southpaws, and as we had the best of the species in Waddell, it knocked all of my pitching plans gally west.

I had figured on using the Rube twice or even three times against the New York club, because he always could work out of turn, and I knew if he won his first start the Giants could not beat him in any remaining games he pitched.

The loss of Waddell also put the Athletics' players in despair, and the morale of the team was measurably lowered.

RUMORS OF COUP

Waddell's accident sent rumors flying thick and fast. Because of his well-known eccentricities, some of the fans accused him of "laying down." They declared that influence had been set to work to keep him out of the Athletics lineup during the games with the Giants.

The wildest sort of the stories were put in circulation. On the other side, we were accused of exaggerating Waddell's condition for the sake of effect and that when the series opened, the Rube would walk to the rubber to pitch the first game.

"Mack is trying to put something over on McGraw," was the way one restless fan phrased it.

I sincerely believe that if Waddell had walked out to pitch the first game half of the spectators would have exclaimed: "I told you so."

Unfortunately for us, the accident was a solemn fact. The truth was that the Rube was not able to raise his arm.

Knowing the Rube as I did, I'm positive that he would have shed his life's blood to be in the series and duel with Mathewson.

The Rube had his faults, but he never was a coward and all of the gold in Christendom never could buy him. These ungrounded and undeserved rumors of scandalmongers were a rank injustice to the great lefthander.

Long's Sport Comment

Gelbert, who has looked like a million-dollar ball player in the series, and who played a prominent part in putting the Cards back in the fight, has been referred to all around the circuit as Charley. But his father, the original Charley, says that is not the boy's name.

The elder Gelbert says his son was christened Magnut Ott Gelbert and Charles has no part in it. The father, who is attending the series, and rooting hard for the Cardinals, will be recalled by Pittsburghers as the once famous all-America football star of the University of Pennsylvania who played end later for the great D. C. & A. C. professional eleven of the Steel City.

Jimmy Dykes

YOUNG GELBERT, THOUGH the kid of the series in age and experience, has been a brilliant standout in batting and fielding since the fighting began last Wednesday. He has not been surpassed, and has rarely been equaled by any of the older infielders on either front. Joe Boley's brilliant playing has not excelled Gelbert's and lightning work by the youngster at two stages of the Saturday and Sunday numbers had much to do with choking of threatened Philadelphia rallies. Where Frankie Frisch, who had been expected to shine, has been erratic at times in the keystone terrain, Gelbert has been as steady as the traditional clock. Gelbert, Boley, Max Bishop and Sparky Adams have been the best performers among the infielders. Jimmy Dykes was leaving nothing to be desired at the hot corner for the A's until his costly error in the fourth game gave the Cards two runs and a victory, where Grove otherwise would have had a 1-to-1 tie going into the ninth inning. Dykes has proved himself a valuable player for all that, and Cardinal pitchers are authority for the statement that he is just as dangerous at the plate, and apt to hit a ball as hard as Simmons, or Cochrane, or Foxx.

THE SEEMING BLUNDER of Gabby Street in failing to send up a pinch hitter for Flint Rhem in the second inning of the second game, when there were runners on first and third bases and none out, and Rhem was too ineffective to last the distance, was duplicated by Mack in the fourth game.

Connie may have had his own good reasons for letting Grove bat in the seventh inning when there was a man on first with only one out, and defeat certain unless the A's got two more runs, but, if so, it was not apparent to the onlookers. Offense was needed then, rather than defense, and permitting Grove to hit for himself did not look to be a promising way to get the runs needed to tie and score. Lefty killed what chance there might have been by striking out.

FOR THE FIRST time since 1926, the club owners are going to get some real money out of the series. The comeback of the Cards that squelched any possibilitiy of the struggles being decided in four or five games was a big break for the magnates.

Pickings for the moguls have been lean in the last three World Series, as two series were decided in four games each and the other in five. The players get the bulk of the receipts of the first four games, so that there was little left for the club owners in 1927, 1928 or 1929, but this year they are assured a neat intake, with the fight certain to go at least six games.

Edgewood Club Title Retained by Miller

H. F. Miller, jr., won the Edgewood Country Club championship for the fourth consecutive season by defeating L. W. Yingling, 12 and 10, in the 36-hole final of the annual club championship yesterday afternoon. Final matches in other divisions resulted as follows:

Second division, H. C. Stafford defeated E. F. Handloser, 4 and 3; third division, F. C. Pierson defeated B. W. Flint, 1 up, 19 holes; fourth division, R. I. Cunningham defeated G. K. Warn, 2 and 1; fifth division, D. E. Stoltz defeated A. C. Streamer, 2 up.

MACK STILL CONFIDENT OF WIN

runs defeated Grove and put the Cardinals on even terms with us in the World Series.

In the third inning, the Cardinals scored their first run on Miller's inability to hold Gelbert's hit along the right field line to a two-base hit and Haines came along with a single that scored him after he had taken third. So I don't consider any of the scoring done by the Cardinals yesterday to have been lean, but nevertheless the runs came in and beat us fairly.

Haines pitched wonderful ball after the first inning, but we must not overlook the catch that Blades made off Cochrane in the third inning, as Simmons followed with a hit and considerable damage could have been done if Mickey's hit had gone safe.

Don't let anyone think for a minute that two straight defeats here has caused the Athletic players to lose any of their confidence.

They will be back today with fire in their eyes. They have a habit that just when they look their worst, they jump right out of it and get back in their stride. They did this all through the pennant race this year as well as in 1929.

There's a lot of life in the Athletics and they are going to prove what they can do when their backs are against the wall. I predict that they will show some real baseball in the remaining games of the series.

We will be back again at the Cardinals today and I predict we will be playing the grade of ball that is in us. Yesterday's defeat was only a temporarily set back.

Flashing a great attack and a good defense, the Dunlevy Soccer Club scored its first victory in the Keystone League by defeating Primrose, at the Panhandle grounds, 2 to 1, yesterday. A crowd of 3,000 lined the field.

In the first half Andy Savage scored first, and then Johnny McCosky turned in one that left the Primrose goalie standing still. In the second half Primrose reduced the score when Hainault beat Dolphi with a good shot.

In other contests yesterday, Shannon Fintex and Curry played a 1-1 tie; Gladden topped Bridgmont, 5-2; Elizabeth lost to Herminie, 4-1; Heidelberg Juniors swamped Glendale, 5-1; Mather was nosed out by Clarksville, 4-3; Horning won over Mollenauer, 3-1; Morgan blanked Houston, 6-0; Vestaburg was whitewashed by Gallatin, 2-0; Manown and Victory Hill tied at 1-all; Fitz Henry bumped Gratztown, 3-0, and Coverdale tripped the Shannon Fintex Juniors, 1-0

Stock Market in Need of Organized Leadership On 'Bull' Side.

What this market really needs, and what it has been lacking since early September, is organized leadership on the constructive side. The action of the list for several weeks now has indicated very clearly the absence of anything in the way of a united front on the bull side. Disintegration of the bull party which banded together early in the summer in an effort to turn the market definitely was the development which paved the way for the recent return of prices to the year's lowest levels. This element was presumably discouraged by the failure of fall business to develop better than normal seasonal expansion and likewise by the absence of anything to suggest an early revival of public participation in speculative activities.

Just when a new bull campaign might be expected to develop is not yet indicated. But there are some interesting factors in the present situation. Realization that the time for the appearance of bad third quarter corporation statements was approaching undoubtedly played a part in the winding up of the last effort on the part of the bulls. It was probably realized that these reports would prove more or less embarrassing to the market. Still it requires no great stretch of the imagination to conceive of the possibility of the appearance of these reports providing a rather unusual opportunity for accumulation in preparation for a new bull campaign designed to discount business improvement which is expected to materialize in the early months of 1931. With statements for the September quarter out of the way, the market should be able to look forward to more encouraging developments over the balance of the year.

Figures from Detroit place total new passenger automobile registrations for the country as a whole during August at 203,737 units. This compares with total registrations of 254,098 units in July and shows a contraction of about 46 per cent compared with August last year when the total was 376,686 units. Ford passenger vehicles accounted for 38 per cent of the August figures as against 43 per cent of the July total and 36.3 per cent of the aggregate of new registrations in August a year ago. For the first eight months of the year total passenger car registrations are placed at 2,111,354 units, indicating a decrease of about 29 per cent from the 2,964,746 total reported for the corresponding period of 1929.

One firm cites the relation of the market value of the common capitalization of several companies to their net current asset position at recent low levels as indicating the drastic nature of the deflation that has taken place in many directions. It singles out six corporations whose total common stocks recently were selling in the open market at a value less than the net current assets of such companies. White Motor stock had a value of $24,000,000 at the recent low of 30, compared with net current assets of $28,190,444; National Surety of $21,000,000 at 70 compared with net current of $30,078,283, and prairie Oil and Gas $60,134,200 at 28 compared with net current assets totaling $86,160,163. Munsingwear Company, Lima Locomotive and Hupp Motor were the other three instances cited.

One financial weekly publication, widely known for the consistently bearish attitude it has assumed toward the market, has presented a decidedly optimistic opinion on the current situation. It points out that the inability of professions to dislodge any really important blocks of stock in the recent setback, coupled with ability of the leaders to hold their ground firmly, suggests that someone has seemingly been willing to take stock in quantity. The review concludes by stating that it believes the ending of the current decline marks the end of the whole 1929-1930 downward movement, citing that the position of money rates, bond prices and business are clearly favorable from a long range standpoint.

Gasoline consumption for the seven months ended July totaled 5,629,582,000 gallons, an increase of 9 per cent over the corresponding 1929 period. In the similar period of 1929 the gain was 12.79 per cent over the first seven months of 1928. Sales of taxed gasoline in July in 42 states showed a gain of 5.6 per cent over the consumption in the same month last year.

HOW'S BUSINESS?

ACTUAL FACTS ON CONDITIONS TODAY

By FRELING FOSTER

Air Transport Activity Shows Big Gain

The quantity of air mail dispatched, and the total number of miles flown by the regularly-scheduled commercial air lines of the United States during the first half of 1930 are compared with the corresponding figures for 1929 and 1928. Sources: U. S. Post Office Department, Aeronautics Branch of the U. S. Department of Commerce, and the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce.

Air Mail Dispatched

Weight in Pounds

The quantity of air mail carried during the first half of 1930 showed an increase of 657,120 pounds or 17.4% more than in the first half of the stupendous 1929. The weight increase is equivalent to 5,256,960 two-ounce letters, and at a minimum cost of 2½ times more than regular first-class postage. This is quite an extra expenditure, it seems, for a country which is supposed to be squeezing every penny.

Commercial Miles Flown

With Mail, Freight and Passengers

The number of miles flown by the scheduled air lines of and in the United States during the first six months of this year showed an increase of 1,523,997 miles or 16.6% more than in the first six months of 1929. A good, healthy growth! It is interesting to know that the 10,725,335 miles covered in the first half of 1930 mean an average of 412,513 miles a week or 58,930 miles each day, including Sundays.

STOCKS SLUMP TO NEW LOWS FOR YEAR

Rallies Cut Losses Some But Trading Turns Dull on Upswings—Declines Wide

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—It was another one of those Mondays of deep-dyed blue in Wall street today.

Share prices skidded downward under only moderately heavy offerings starting with the stock market's opening gong, and lost most of the recovery from the low levels of last Tuesday. The market was inclined to recover for a time during the morning and again during the early afternoon, when recoveries of a point or so from the bottom were recorded by some pivotal shares, but trading turned dull on upturns.

A wide assortment of shares fell to new lows for the year or longer, including several leading rails. Radio touched new low ground, close to 25, before rallying, and American Telephone sold within a fraction of the 1930 minimum. U. S. Steel, New York Central, Johns Manville, Air Reduction and American and Foreign Power lost 3 or more, while shares dropping 4 to more than 5 included Westinghouse Electric, American Can, Dupont, Eastman, Worthington, American Water Works and Atchison. Allied Chemical tumbled more than 15 points.

INVESTORS DISCOURAGED

Business reports over the week-end were not reassuring, and holders of stocks showed signs of again giving way to the unreasoning gloom which gripped speculative quarters during most of September. Much of the selling appeared to be for short account, but extensive unloading of such shares as American Telephone and American Can indicated that investors were growing discouraged.

Some of the investment advisory services, however, recommended discriminating purchases of stocks in their week-end letters. There was a decided tendency, nevertheless, to steer clear of attempts at forecasting the immediate future of the market.

Such investment buying orders as have been appearing have largely been placed under the current levels in the hope of getting better bargains. One experienced group of investment trusts was understood to have placed several such orders. On the other hand, it was rumored in brokerage circles that a few of the smaller trusts were selling.

The fact that many of the more popular shares are still selling at earnings ratios well above those reached in the 1920-21 bear market still inclined investors toward caution. There are still many leading stocks that are selling from 20 to more than 30 times this year's estimated earnings. Whether stocks are justified in selling at such levels remains a moot question. As this year's earnings are abnormally low, some present prices may be justified by prospects of improvement next year.

1921 YIELD LEVELS

On the whole, stocks have been reduced to yield levels readily comparable to those of 1921. Moody's points out that the average yield of all dividend paying stocks on September 30 was 7.91 per cent, or not far from the 8.08 per cent reached as of November 13, 1929. While the figure 7.91 was substantially less than the 9.92 per cent reached in 1921, it is pointed out that credit conditions are radically different. Money was comparatively scarce and bonds of all grades commanded a substantially higher return in 1921. Moody's calculates that the present common stock yield is "relatively" as high as it was in 1921.

Definite developments in the day's corporate news were limited. Early estimates indicated that the steel industry might not maintain last week's rate of operations. President Storey, of Atchison, stated that low earnings had caused the company to dip into surplus for capital outlays. The Great Northern and Northern Pacific were expected to defer plans to build a 250-mile extension in Montana, owing to poor earnings. Call money again renewed at 2 per cent.

AMERADA-UNION IN OIL DEAL

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 6.—Amerada Corporation has sold to Union Oil Company of California, an undivided half-interest in its King lease of 160 acres in Kettleman Hills field, California, for a consideration of $8,000,000. One-half the consideration will be in cash and short-term negotiable obligations of Union Oil and one-half from 550 per cent of Union Oil's share of production of the property, free of all expenses to Amerada.

Cost of development will be shared equally by Union and Amerada. There is no production on the property as yet, but it is offset by a large producer, and the first joint Amerada-Union well is being drilled.

The King lease was purchased by Amerada last year for $200,000 cash and $200,000 out of one-half the first oil produced.

ATCHISON CUTS EXPENSES

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—W. B. Storey president of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad, said today that the road shortly will place an order for around 370 miles of steel rails. He added that the outlook for the balance of the year is too uncertain to make any estimate of earnings.

The management is cutting expenses sharply to meet the decline in revenues, Mr. Storey said, and he added that on September 1 the road had $28,000,000 in cash and $18,000,000 in securities, explaining that it had been necessary to dip into reserves, because of lower earnings, to meet capital outlays.

During the week ended October 4, the Atchison handled 40,189 revenue cars, compared with 40,164 in the previous week and 49,967 in 1929.

Two Held for Fraud In Manhattan Deal

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Richard H. Brown, former president of Manhattan Electrical Supply Company, and Norman B. Ross, formerly of Ross Petroleum Corporation, of Texas, were held under $3,000 bail by Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard when arraigned on an indictment charging mail fraud and conspiracy in connection with alleged manipulation of Manhattan Electrical Supply Company stock. They pleaded not guilty. Four other defendants will be arraigned tomorrow morning.

Starrett Leases Cincinnati Hotel

CINCINNATI, Oct. 6.—Starrett Investing Corporation, subsidiary of Starrett Corporation, which has just completed a 48-story building in downtown Cincinnati, has leased the 800-room hotel section to the St. Nicholas Plaza Corporation, a new company formed to operate the hotel. The hotel unit was built at a cost of $7,000,000, and occupies 27 stories.

DAILY TRUE STORY

Picking Pippins

"Eden Apples" went to the far corners of the world.

The name was thoroughly protected. These apples came from the great Eden Orchards, which were the property of "Eden Apples, Inc."

This was a closed corporation, very much closed. One couldn't buy into it.

John Marsters was the general manager. He had under him quite an army of employes the year around, and a veritable army of pickers during the season—the "season" being that time when Eden Apples were ready to be picked, polished, wrapped, crated and sold at very fancy prices.

When Col. Butler, who owned these great orchards, died, he had turned it all into a solid corporation, and the business went on quite as usual.

A keeper looked out for the big old Butler mansion. General Manager Marsters lived in the pretty house a mile from the old mansion and Betty Marsters, his daughter, loved to "put on dog," as they said in the neighborhood.

Betty's father was the "big man" in the neighborhood.

Betty considered herself to be quite a matrimonial catch, and she was, in that neighborhood.

She and Lulu Hudson had been schoolmates and great chums in those days when the girls were too young to care anything about the social position that money insured.

Lulu was the daughter of Sim Hudson, keeper of the Butler mansion.

Position Assured

Sim Hudson was the one man connected with Eden Apples, Inc., that the general manager could not fire, being retained by the company's lawyers. Betty felt her position was very much above that of Lulu's little niche, in their local life.

Besides, Lulu aired and dusted the rooms in the big old mansion and did a great deal toward helping her father keep the grounds in fair condition.

And every year since she had been a girl of 12 Lulu worked in the orchards. Her job was supervising Orchard No. 9, so far as seeing that apples were carefully hand picked.

And so, for the past seven or eight years, Betty had been inclined to patronize Lulu on every possible occasion.

When Hal Wentworth came to be head bookkeeper for the concern, he seemed rather interested in Lulu.

Because he was a city chap and somewhat sporty, Betty decided it would be rather nice to have him beau her about. Hal had been about with Lulu quite a lot, taking her to the town picture shows and the like, but when Betty went after him he ceased to be interested in Lulu.

If Lulu felt badly over this, she was too wise to show it.

"I suppose," she said, when Betty stopped at the keeper's lodge ostensibly for a drink of water, but in reality to make Lulu envious of her new clothes and sport car and especially the wrist watch Hal had given her on her birthday, "that you and Hal will be getting married soon?"

"Married? Oh, I don't know. I really think I'd look higher than an apple orchard laborer."

Lulu was innocently puzzled.

Understands Situation

"Of course—that's different."

Lulu began to see the situation—Betty had placed herself on a much higher platform than herself.

"As near as I can see," said Lulu, with a laugh that irritated Betty, "we are all eating Eden Apples bread and butter."

"There is a great difference," Betty insisted, loftily. "Well, I've got to go and meet Hal."

Betty climbed into her car and drove away, her face very red. She had a talk with her father that night at dinner and learned that even if he wished to do so, he couldn't oust Sim Hudson from his job, and it was the very last thing he would think of doing.

The picking season finally started.

Betty had a great idea. She put on her sportiest clothes and hung around Orchard No. 9, which was the largest of the orchards and devoted exclusively to pippins, still a popular kind of apple.

She had a great deal to say about being amused watching the folks work. Hal Wentworth came out to watch. He had never been there during a picking season.

Betty and Hal were close to where Lulu was instructing some new pickers as to the proper way to pick apples and not bruise them.

"It's so interesting, Hal, to watch these laborers, like the simple peasants abroad," Betty said, loudly.

"Certainly is," he agreed.

Tuttle Apologizes

A tall, freckled-faced young man in painfully new blue jeans was listening attentively to Lulu's instructions, but he paused and stared back hard at Betty when she said this. Betty stared back. There was something in the amused expression of the tall freckled young man that made Betty furious.

"I wish," she said to Lulu, "that you would keep your fellow laborers so busy they cannot stare rudely."

Lulu glanced up at her and then at Anson Tuttle, the tall freckled young man who had been given a picker's job that morning. Young Mr. Tuttle flushed so his freckles stood out.

"Did you get out of the wrong side of the bed, Betty, or haven't you got your invitation to the Astor ball yet?" Lulu asked, pleasantly.

Anson Tuttle emitted a loud guffaw, a regular horse laugh. Then he meekly apologized to Lulu and went back to his apple picking. Betty stared hard at Lulu, who didn't glance toward her. Then Betty went to her father about it. She virtually demanded that he keep Lulu out of the orchard and she absolutely demanded that he fire the insolent bounder whose name she had learned was Anson Tuttle.

Anson Tuttle apologized again, after Betty had gone, to Lulu.

During the next few days he and Lulu became great friends. She liked the intelligent way he worked, and she told Mr. Marsters about it.

They were picking the last of the apples in Orchard No. 9 when Betty appeared again. This time it was in the forenoon. She had been riding. She left her mount by the gate, calling one of the boy pickers to hold him.

Very smart in her riding habit, she sauntered down to where Lulu was with Anson Tuttle, who looked her over with a lofty, amused air.

Betty Gets Angry

"You seem to spend a lot of time trying to teach the freckled persons how to pick apples," Betty said.

Lulu had been watching her.

"Go and take your horse, I can't spare that boy to hold him," Lulu said, quietly.

"The very idea of such insolence!" Betty cried, angrily. "Who are you to give me orders like that?"

"You will have to—never mind—"

Freckled-faced Anson Tuttle followed leisurely.

"This is the limit—of all the ignorant, despicable things I ever saw, you are the limit!" Betty cried, in a terrible temper.

Anson Tuttle stepped up.

He lifted his hat, he was very polite, he even smiled an amused little smile.

"I shall have to ask you to leave this orchard, Miss Marsters. You are doing no particular good for Eden Apples and you are delaying the work," he said.

"Well—well! Of all insolent, crude country bumpkins, ordering me around! Who do you think you are?"

"Me? I'm just Eden Apples," Anson told her, quietly.

Burned in Plane Crash, Ella Comes Through

The Sun-Telegraph presents the Ella Cinders strip today in slightly damaged condition. The damage was caused by a crash of the night air mail plane at Warren, O.

Ella Cinders is accustomed to riding in airplanes. For two years she has made the transcontinental journey every week, from Los Angeles to New York, and she is quite used to it now.

When Charlie Plumb, who draws Ella Cinders from continuity supplied by Bill Conselman, finished today's drawing in his studio at San Gabriel, Cal., he placed Ella in the custody of the air mail, confident that she would arrive safely in the New York offices of Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service. The plane roared down the runway and rose into the sky with Ella resting securely in her mail pouch, not at all apprehensive of the journey.

PLANE CRASHES

Pilot Ambrose Banks has the difficult assignment of guiding the air mail from Cleveland to New York over treacherous air territory. Ella had ridden with him before, and knew she was safe enough with Pilot Banks to sleep with security on the dangerous trip over the Alleghenies. However, an hour and a half out of Cleveland, Banks heard his motor sputter, and looking benear him saw flames licking their way up the stick he held in his hand.

He looked about him for a landing field, and through the heavy fog that covered the ground beneath him, he saw what appeared to be a clear field. But the fog hid from his view a telephone pole and, as the descending plane neared the ground, it crashed into the pole and rolled over on the ground.

Banks crawled from the cockpit and pulled some of the pouches from the burning plane. The blaze grew hotter and the fire spread until the entire plane was enveloped in flames. A moment later a motorist found Banks, dazed, wandering about the plane.

ELLA INJURED

Ella had been rudely awakened by the crash. Suddenly she felt herself jerked from the burning cockpit, slightly injured but not discouraged. Ella is always happy, and even despite her mishap she remarked:

"A Cinders I was born, but I'll not end in cinders."

Today a slightly burned strip appears in the Sun-Telegraph and will serve to remind you that sometimes the most thrilling of Ella's adventures are never recorded. But through fire or water or thunder or earthquake Ella comes through, and those of us who live her adventures with her find many of our daily trials somewhat eased by her smiling, tender, philosophy.

Janitor Stotker found another freshly discarded whiskey bottle by the courthouse, Saturday morning. It contained but a few drops. The one he found under the sheriff's window, the morning before, had a generous sized drink of red corn sugar whiskey in it. This second bottle was tossed aside at the south side of the courthouse instead of the north, as the other was.

Pittsburgh Pays Homage To George Westinghouse

Pittsburgh is honoring George Westinghouse today by dedicating to his memory a monument in Schenley Park. In thus calling attention to the greatness of a former citizen, the city adds luster to its own reputation.

George Westinghouse conferred honor on Pittsburgh, helping to spread throughout the world the city's fame as a manufacturing center and as a place where inventive genius thrives. Wherever railroads are operated—and that means, in practically every country of the world—Pittsburgh is known for Westinghouse's inventions.

He gave to the world many priceless gifts, the product of his fertile mind, but probably is best known for the airbrake. Inventors whose ideas are regarded as visionary and impractical should take heart from Westinghouse's experience with the airbrake.

The story goes that while his designs were still in a more or less rudimentary shape he visited Commodore Vanderbilt and solicited his support. The Commodore is reported to have answered: "If I understand you, young man, you propose to stop a railroad train with wind. I have no time to listen to such nonsense."

But within a few years the airbrake was being used on all the Vanderbilt railroads.

Less spectacular than his invention of the airbrake, but also very important, was Westinghouse's work in introducing alternating current electrical machinery. It was due to his efforts that this method was employed in the World's Fair at Chicago in 1893.

One of the things that is not to be overlooked in reviewing Westinghouse's career is that, unlike many geniuses, he was a practical man of affairs, a brilliantly successful business man. At the peak of his career he was president of 30 corporations, with extensive works not only in the United States but also abroad.

Thanks are due the Westinghouse employes who have given the monument, a beautiful work of art, to the city. It is an artistic creation of which Pittsburgh may well be proud, a precious ornament to Schenley Park.

The public will appreciate the design, which is descriptive rather than idealistic or allegorical. There will also be appreciation of the lovely setting in which the memorial stands—the pond with its lily pads, the weeping willows, the rhododendrons. It is interesting to note that to make this garden spot luxuriant the soil was enriched with 60 tons of peat, 30 tons of top soil and 2,000 pounds of fertilizer.

Congratulations to the artists—to Henry Hornbostel, the architect, who designed the memorial with the co-operation of Eric Fisher Wood; to Daniel Chester French, the sculptor, who executed the figures; to Paul Fjelde, who did the panels, and to Massaniello Piccirilli, who modeled the entire monument in wax.

And congratulations also to the many others who contributed to this splendid project, and whose work, if not as conspicuous as that of those who have been named, was none the less indispensable to its success.

Inconsistencies in Pennington's Views

Prohibition Administrator John D. Pennington should be consistent.

In a telegram to the meeting held in Memorial Hall last Friday night to further the cause of prohibition he said he was "more than ever convinced of the ultimate success of national prohibition."

But he expresses a somewhat different view in his letter to Judge Joseph Buffington, which the judge made public at a meeting of federal jurists in Washington. In that letter Pennington expressed doubt that the Volstead Act can be enforced without the co-operation of state, county and municipal officials, and at the same time called attention to the fact that counties like Allegheny County, which are anti-dry in sentiment, do not extend co-operation to the federal enforcement officers.

In other words, prohibition can be enforced in communities where the people want it, and cannot be in communities where the people are opposed to it.

That is a sensible view.

It is pertinent to recall that that was the situation prior to the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment. Through local and state option many boroughs, counties and states had prohibition before the Volstead Act was passed, and it was enforced as effectively then as it is now.

Federation of Labor Is Another Pittsburgh Baby

Occasion has arisen during the last few weeks to comment in these columns on several gigantic industries, now national or world-wide in their scope, which had Pittsburgh for their birthplace. The report of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, issued today in connection with the fiftieth annual convention of the organization, which is being held in Boston this week, directs attention to another Pittsburgh baby which has had a remarkable growth.

Preparing for the Federation's jubilee, which will be held next year, the executive council recalls that it had its origin in a meeting held in Turner Hall, Pittsburgh, on November 15, 1881. There were present 107 delegates, representing eight national and international organizations, 11 central bodies, 42 local unions, three district assemblies (Knights of Labor) and 46 local assemblies (Knights of Labor).

The Federation now has 2,961,096 dues-paying members, drawn from 104 national and international unions and 29,226 local unions.

Recalling what the Federation has done to improve the status of the workingman, recalling its patriotism and its staunch opposition to Communism and other subversive doctrines, everyone must rejoice in its growth and its strength.

The Long and Slimy Trail -:- By Nelson Harding

Widespread bribery behind it.

BIOGENESIS

By Archibald Henderson

When Francesco Redi in the seventeenth century and Spallanzani in the eighteenth century demonstrated the fallacy of spontaneous generation, they laid the foundations for Pasteur and the modern school of bio-chemists. So far as human observation and experimentation go, no form of life arises today except from pre-existing life.

There is no reason for doubting that life, as shown by the paleontological record, has been present on the earth without interruption for an indefinite period, estimated at some hundreds of millions of years. The questions which naturally arise are:

How did life get here, if not transported to this planet from some other part of the universe?

If life was not thus transported, how did life arise spontaneously from non-living matter, at some time in the past, as a natural result of the evolution of the earth and its elements?

Various theories regarding the origin of life have been advanced in comparatively recent years. None of these theories purport to be final solutions of the problem, but rather are tentative moves toward a formulation of hypothetical conditions which might logically have given rise to the genesis of vitality.

The theory known as vitalism has its origin in the remote past. But it did not receive adequate formulation until the early part of the eighteenth century.

The vitalists of that period, says Woodruff in "The Origin of Life," assumed that an all-controlling, unknown and unknowable, mystical, hypermechanical force was responsible for all living processes. Such a mystical theory can find no standing in such a form today, as it runs counter to the fundamental principles of science. But even today there are vitalists who hold that life phenomena are in part at least the resultant of manifestations of matter and energy which transcend and differ intrinsically in kind from those displayed in the inorganic world.

There is another theory, known as the cosmozoa theory, which merely succeeds in thrusting the solution of the problem a step further back. It transfers the origin of life to a "conveniently inaccessible corner of the universe where its solution is impossible." There are great difficulties in any theory which maintains that life has never arisen de novo on the earth, but has been transported hither from elsewhere in the universe. There is no empirical foundation for the two basic features of this theory, namely that life exists elsewhere in the universe and can be maintained during the interstellar voyage.

Phlueger has advanced the theory that life had its origin in cyanogen, which, with its compounds, arises only in an incandescent heat. Accordingly, he holds that "life is derived from fire, and its fundamental conditions were laid down at a time when the earth was still an incandescent ball." Other interesting and suggestive theories have been advanced by Moore, Allen, Troland and Osborne. But none of the theories does more than scratch the surface of this great problem. It baffles solution, since biologists as yet have been unable to obtain empirical evidence on any of the crucial questions relating to the origin of life on the earth.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Have you brains, lady? If so, how do they affect you?

Brains, according to the writer of the following letter, are a doubtful asset for wives. S'all right to have them, provided you know how to carry the extra ballast. But how many do? Here, for instance, is a lady friend of his. She is also, doubtless, a lady friend of yours. You can find her like in every village street. She has become one of the most significant institutions in modern American life. Should we be glad she has? Or has her quest for knowledge spoiled her value as a woman and as a wife? Read this letter and then let's hear YOUR reaction:

DEAR MISS ROBINSON:

I am interested in your defense of professional women as wives. I agree that they should make the finest wives—PROVIDED THEY KNOW HOW TO BE WOMEN FIRST AND ARE ABLE TO COMBINE DISCRIMINATION AND COMMON SENSE IN THEIR DAILY DEALINGS WITH THEIR HUSBANDS.

Here is an example of what I mean: I have a friend who is a clerk, just as I am. He has no ambition, but he is a jolly, good fellow, peaceful, fond of his home, a playmate to children, always ready to run errands for his wife, whom he adores, and friendly to every one. It is his nature to be good—a lymphatic person who is quite satisfied with his position in life.

His wife is the opposite. She is a professional woman very keen for acquiring knowledge. She has taken up philosophy, music, art, public speaking, interior decorating—although she is not outstanding in any branch. These interests keep her very busy and excited. And they have made a breach, which is rapidly widening, between her and her husband.

He likes a 25-cent show around the corner. She scorns it. She goes to concerts, lectures, psychological classes, etc. Now I am not criticizing her for this. I admire her thirst for knowledge. But I feel that her use of knowledge, after she gets it, is all wrong. She has a passion for being admired for her "intelligence," and she ruthlessly sacrifices her husband's pride to that passion.

When they have company she skillfully leads the conversation toward subjects on which she is conversant, and, I admit, makes a brilliant display of her conversational powers. But, at the same time, by her display she belittles her husband. Whenever he makes a misstatement, or a slip in his English, she darts forward to correct him—with the result that my friend has become afraid to speak, as also have most of their visitors. There are no children, though he loves them. But I guess she feels that they would cramp her style.

Of course, she's terribly dissatisfied with her husband. She is always complaining because he has no ambition and nagging at him to "improve himself." You can see that she feels she has married beneath her and is sorry for herself.

This woman is young and beautiful, and yet she is not charming or beloved, because, in her quest for knowledge she has lost her femininity. She has forgotten that woman's greatest power and value lie rather in the heart than in the brain. I think she would prove her intelligence more if she would at least pretend to be humble—if she would seem to consult her husband and friends—instead of sacrificing their feelings to her passion for admiration. And I find this same ruthless egotism in most intellectual women. I can't help thinking that the old-fashioned woman, with her sweetness and unselfishness, really got more out of life, and gave more than these brilliant moderns who have exchanged their feminine fragrance for a shallow veneer of culture.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

Doing Business

The wet plank adopted by the New York State Republicans indicates the boys are going to do their spring plowing with a borrowed mule.

The Democrats have always advocated gargling for a sore throat.

But, then, the Democrats have been very liberal with other people's elections.

The Republicans haven't said anything that hasn't been denied before.

They admit they must bow to the Constitution and tip our hat to the amendments.

We passed one amendment prohibiting the making of liquor.

Now we need one restricting its sale.

Millions have been spent enforcing this business and many people killed and injured. We must economize.

What this country needs most is a good five-cent scar.

The corner saloon must not come back. To the corner.

It never will. It's doing too well in the middle of the block.

Let the government turn the liquor problem over to the states. And relieve congestion in the cities.

The evil of prohibition lies in its compulsory aroma. Tell a free born American citizen that he cannot eat potatoes with a knife and he will show his independence by putting on roller skates and doing a jig on a slanting roof.

That's what makes us the great nation we are with the help of daylight saving. The reason why so many motor cars are wrapped around fire plugs is because their drivers are infuriated by the no parking signs.

We are suspicious when the Democrats and the Republicans finally agree on the same thing. Twenty years ago we would have never suspected that some day the governor of Texas would be effeminate.

The next governor of the State of New York must be wet because both parties have nominated that brand. Maybe the people will compromise on two governors.

If the amendment is repealed there will be no hurried industry in breweries, no tremendous importation of Scotch and no training of young bartenders for the thirsty stampede.

We've got enough of everything to start with.

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

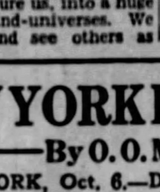
BOOK V.
HISTORY AND ADVENTURES OF LIFE.
Chapter I. The Prologue.
§1. The Scale of the Universe.

The time has now come to give an account of the actual history of life upon the earth, the procession of events which, never repeating themselves, have led onwards until this present instant where the past is busy eating into the future. Of this colossal drama no man knows the scheme.



H. G. Wells

Some prophesy catastrophic end, others a slow and gloomy deterioration; still others see no necessary full-stop to the achievements of life, or if they do, comfort themselves with the reflection that life may prove itself abundantly well worth living in the long epochs still to come, itself its own justification. Man at least believes that he has been called to take the leading part in it; and he is not unnaturally interested in finding out all that has gone before in the story.

Goethe's Faust and the Book of Job both have a Prologue in Heaven, and without attention to the prologue we could not grasp the full meaning of their main story. The same is true of our drama of organic evolution.

The history of living matter grows out of the history of planet earth of which it is but a part; and the history of earth in its turn grows out of the history of the star we call the sun, which, again, far back, merges into the history of a great nebula.

We may be tempted to use theatrical metaphors, speak of the earth as life's stage and the heavens as its background. But this is not really accurate. Living matter is but a special arrangement of ordinary matter, the evolution of life but a local and peculiar eddy, so to speak, in cosmic evolution.

Players, stage and background, are all of one substance together.

And before going further we had better be sure that we have grasped the scale on which time is employed in the making of worlds.

The matter of this amazing universe of ours is grouped, so the astronomers assure us, into a huge number of island-universes. We live in one, and see others as spiral nebulae, star-clouds or star-families. These island-universes drift sparsely in space, like jelly-fishes in the sea.

Their number runs into millions, perhaps into millions of millions. Somewhere between five and eight million years ago (we are following Sir James Jeans), the gassy nebula which was the beginning of our particular island universe was in process of condensing into those separate and more solid knots of matter we call stars.

When it had finished, between 20 and 30 thousand million stars were in existence in our own star-family. Our sun was one of this numerous progeny. It, like all stars, had its own history and life-cycle, whose course is of astronomic rather than biological interest; we must leave our readers to find out about it for themselves in the pages of Eddington or Jeans.

But to the sun, after a great part of its history had run, there happened a very rare accident; it was disrupted by the approach of another star. This, the astronomers tell us, took place about 2,000 million years ago, certainly not less than 1,600 or more than 3,000 million years back.

If, to get the whole of our sun's history on to a page, we represent one million million years by one inch, the time during which earth has existed as a separate planet is so small in comparison that it cannot even be indicated on this scale.

Multiply the scale of our time-diagram by a hundred, and the history of earth appears as a space about a quarter of an inch long. Multiply our scale another hundred times, and we get on to our page rather more than half of geologic time since the first stratified rocks were made.

About four inches covers all known vertebrate history, and less than a quarter of an inch the whole existence of man.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Out early to market and inquired of a lady I mistook for Louise Groody, "What are you doing here?" and judging me a flirt she flounced away. So buying Malaga grapes, head cheese, briny Ghetto pickles and the strongest white radishes I ever tasted.

Homeward I recalled the skit where the starving actor McIntyre begs something to eat from the pompous Heath who replies: "Didn't I give you a rad-did-dish Thursday?" And skipping through the house caroling: "I bring thee rad-did-dishes," but no one laughed—just another Pagliacci!

With my mother-in-law to the Capitol, which has the politest ushers in town, and to dine at an Hawaiian inn, but no music, which was the excuse for our visit. Then home and tidings that Douglas Fairbanks was at work on a rousing film, choking off rumors of his retirement. To bed.

Most New York department stores allow employes a percentage on purchases in the establishment, provided it is something worn at work. If a man buys a business suit he receives a reduction, but if a sport or dress suit he pays full price. To prevent employes from buying for families or friends at a reduction, they may buy only own sizes in articles and must try them on in the store.

One department store has for years provided a Christmas surprise for D. A. customers—that is customers depositing money for charges against it. On January 1 the firm sends each customer a check for 2 per cent of the yearly purchases.

New York seeks a better name—and it's about time—for its "Department of Plant and Structures" appearing on city buses as the operating head. Almost everybody believes it is a botanical suggestion like "Plants and Flowers." Thus it is a constant mixup, but the title is really meant to convey building plants and building structures. The singular "Plant" is about as clear as several other things in this Tammany mismanaged town. While improving the name they can improve the buses and not make anybody mad, too.

And while knee-deep in this uplift work we wish some semi-colon factory would send an expert to show the correct way to place their wares. In a magazine piece out today I have three where they haven't any business to be at all. I'm a dash boy anyway.

A psychoanalyst tells me about a patient who, although he stands terrorized, visits a local zoo weekly to watch a gliding King cobra slither about a cage. He departs with a raging headache but cannot stay away. A 10-hour-a-day job might break the habit.

I went along with a friend to one of those "by appointment" gymnasiums where they give $25 an hour "treatments." After gravely peeking under his eyelids, trying out his knee twitches and other monkey doodles they resorted to the Bowery expedient of "ganging" him. Or so it seemed to me, for they all pounced on him at once as the finale. He hobbles about like a bounding acrobat who tripped on the last camel. You can get the same kind of "treatment" free calling a night club bouncer a big bum. At least I did once.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

You say that So-and-So is deceitful and two-faced.

You know that he does not care any more for a certain person than you do.

And you not only hate that one but despise him.

You despise him because you believe him to be disreputable and dishonorable and when you meet him you can scarcely treat him decently.

But Mr. So-and-So after expressing to you and to others the same opinion that you hold as to the man, has a different way of showing his dislike.

He is actually polite, really courteous to him and you think he is deceitful.

Perhaps you don't get his view point.

Very likely he is sincere in his scorn of that man's ways and methods.

But he dislikes his principles and not the man himself.

Mr. So-and-So recognizes that we are all human.

He loves humanity and so his dislikes are not so personal.

He can treat his worst enemy well if he is not doing him a personal injury at the moment.

You are some vehement and revengeful and can't understand the calmer sort that can despise methods and like the human side of the individual, so long as it is not directly engaged in deviltry.
